I must record my immense sense of gratitude to Dr. S.S. Kohli, who besides being a perennial fount of inspiration and a perpetual source of guidance, put his personal library at my disposal. And, I sincerely feel that whatever the original value this study may have, springs from its sincere devotion, to this 'Research Magnificent'.

I feel equally obliged and indebted to Dr. Raghbir Singh, whose valuable suggestions, encouraging guidance and special pains that he took to read the manuscript, enabled me to give final shape to the work. He was more of a friend and partook in all my personal difficulties and problems. And despite the odd times of my visit to his place, he always extended hearty welcome to me with a smiling face.

My acknowledgment is due to my wife, who beside being in service, took upon herself the heavy responsibility of all type of odd domestic duties and spared me to work peacefully. I sincerely feel that without her cooperation the project could not be completed.

My earnest thanks are due to Shri Som Nath Dattana, and Sr. Ranjit Singh whose houses were always open to me during my visits and long stay in Chandigarh and who never let me have a feeling of being stranger in a strange city. I am also thankful to S. Gurbachan Singh, who silently watched the progress of the work and did all in his power to help me, whenever an opportunity arose.

I also feel grateful to the writers, whose books have been referred to in this project and feel obliged to the staff of Panjab University Library, Chandigarh, for their cooperation.

In the end, I thank the typist Shri K.R. Mittal, who very patiently and skilfully did his job and helped me in the printing of the title and binding of the project. I also thank a number of other friends of mine who had been helpful to me from time to time.

CHANDIGARH
JUNE, 1979.

(BALBIR SINGH)