ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The following is a humble attempt to show my gratitude and thank all the persons who helped me in making the thesis a reality. First and foremost my teacher, guide and supervisor Dr. H. K. Bhat for his guidance not only during the Ph.D. but also for the entire student days beginning from the masters level in anthropology especially for developing and encouraging interests in the field of medical anthropology. I thank him for his guidance suggestions and constant support regarding all aspects of this work, which included finalization of the current topic, guidance to collect data from the field and utmost patience during the writing and finalization of the thesis.

I am extremely grateful to Prof. M. Annapoorna, Chaiperson, Anthropology for all the support extended for the submission of the thesis. I also thank, Dr. K. Rajashekhara Reddy, Dr. H.M. Ganesh, Dr. Ganghadhar, Dr. N. Ningaiaha and Mr. B. M Srinivasa and other staff of the Department for their cooperation. I also want to thank Dr. Subramanya, C.E for his cooperation and for all his valuable suggestions during the study.

I thank all the non-teaching staff of the department of Anthropology for all the needful help extended during my time in the university. My sincere thanks to Dr. K.Bhamini Rhagavaiah, Mr.S. Mahadeva for without their help this work would not have taken the present shape.

I take this opportunity to thank all the slum dwellers who were my subjects and Medical practitioners, Pharmacists and Social workers and NGO’s for sparing their valuable time for the study.
This is also to thank all the informants in the hospital, clinics who voluntarily shared information with me without which the study would not have been possible.

Thanks to all my friends Mrs. Vanya Joseph and Mrs. Reena who helped me and encouraged to submit the thesis, collection of relevant literature and sharing known information on all aspects of the work. Then I also thank all my family members who supported me during my research. My faith on god who helped me to gain the strength to take up Ph.D. research and complete it.

My husband Mr. Ehsan, S. Khouzani, is also a source of inspiration for me. He constantly reminded me to complete it at the earliest. It is indeed a blessing to have him as a family member for the constant support and encouragement.

My father Mr. Maheedhariah and mother Mrs. Shashirekha and my brother Mr. Eshwar and my in laws Mr. Morteza and Mrs. Iranducth who have supported me in all respects to complete my Ph.D. work. Gratitude to the Lord almighty for making it finally happen.

My little thanks to my loving daughter Aryana.S.K. who was also my inspiration to carry out this work.
