ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is my pleasant duty to acknowledge with gratitude the intellectual debt which I owe to Dr. G.P. Rao, my thesis supervisor and teacher. His encouraging appreciation have provided for a disciplined development of my ideas culminating in this thesis. I owe special debt to Dr. S.P. Singh for critically reading my thesis. Infact, almost whole of this work bears imprints of his balanced criticism and scholarly approach. However, if there are any errors remaining, they are entirely mine.

I am highly thankful to Dr. T.N. Kapoor, my teacher, and Head, Department of Commerce and Business Management, Panjab University, Chandigarh for providing me the perennial stimulation in the pursuit of Ph.D. programme in the Department.

Thanks are also due to the University Grants Commission for granting me the Teacher Fellowship (Faculty Improvement Programme) to persue Ph.D. study. Equally thankful I am to the Education authorities, Government of Punjab, for relieving me for three years to work for Ph.D.

I am grateful to the Labour Commissioner, Punjab in particular to Sarvshri Om Parkash, Bhatia, Badru, Jaswinder, Jogi, Santosh, Rajinder and other officials of the Statistical Section, for helping me in the collection of data.

I offer my thanks to Sarvshri Ravinder and Birender, my brothers-in-law for providing secretarial assistance. Among many friends, whose help was invaluable were Suresh Sharma, S.L. Aggarwal, K.L. Verma, N.P. Upadhaya, M.Y. Koul, V.K. Dewan, N.S. Bhalla.

I thank my parents for their constant encouragement in my work. A reference here to my gratitude to my wife, Suman, for enabling me through her infinite service to accomplish this task looks to me selfish and formal but that is truth.

Finally my thanks to Sh. Ramesh, the man who did the tough job of typing the manuscript.
