CONTENTS

Acknowledgement
List of Tables

Chapter 1 — Women and Development: An Essential Understanding

1.1 Introduction
1.2 Conceptualizing the Study
1.3 Objectives of the Study
1.4 Chapterisation Scheme
1.5 Women in / and Development: Dominant Notions and Approaches
1.6 Approaches to Women and Development
1.7 Approaches to Development
1.8 Decentralization: A Mechanism for Rural Development
1.9 Women and PRIs as Agents for Development
1.10 Research Question

Chapter 2 — The Method

2.1 Reservation: The Moral Problem and the Constitution
2.2 Problems of Political Exclusions and Inclusions: 1987-1999
2.3 Karnataka: The Socio-Political Context of the Study
2.4 PRI: Empowerment and Development
2.5 Kodagu District: Rationale for Selection
2.6 Methodology
2.7 The Framework of Power
2.8 Lukes’s Theory of Power
2.9 Giddens’s Notion of Power
Chapter 3 — Kodagu: A Profile

3.1 History and Administration
3.2 Profile: Geography and Economy
3.3 Land Ownership
3.4 Irrigation and Cropping
3.5 Importance of Plantation Economy
3.6 Introducing the Research Sites

Chapter 4 — The Elected Members: A Profile

4.1 Composition of Panchayats
4.2 Empowerment through Political Participation: Certain Indicators
4.3 Empowering and Dis-empowering: Relationship Between Indicators of Participation and Levels of Participation

Chapter 5 — Women in Panchayats

5.1 Perpetuation and Constancy: Exploring the Explanatory Potential of Socialization Theory
5.2 Panchayat: Dependency and Patronage in an Institutional Power Structure
5.3 The Process of Socialization
5.4 Transformation: The Explanatory Potential of the Agency Approach

Chapter 6 — Evolving a Relational Framework

6.1 Marriage Arrangements and Women’s Agency
6.2 Age Gap and Duration of Marriage
6.3 Post-marital Residential Arrangements
6.4 Control over Economic Resources
6.5 Education and Autonomy
6.6 Other Mediations
6.7 Towards a Theory of Relationships
Chapter 7 — Summary and Conclusion

7.1 Overview
7.2 Findings and Some Policy Implications

Bibliography