"Service-oriented functions"

"Junior Police Call scheme of Hong Kong"

41.23 We feel that one service-oriented function, youth counselling, needs to be made a regular feature of Police work.

41.24 The scheme is operated by the Police Community Relations Officers (Chief Inspectors) with the help of other police staff. They include community service in hospitals, children homes, assistance to rural and remote areas in road repairs, training in photography, swimming, gymnastics, music, painting, games organization of camps and picnics and of course, reports to police on crime, missing persons wanted vehicles found property etc. Details are given in appendix III.

42.14 The effectiveness of police women's work would be greatly enhanced if they receive special training in social work in an institute of social science to qualify them to diagnose and treat social ailments. At this juncture, we wish to make it clear that our identification of the above areas in which women police can be used with greater advantage, is not meant to dilute our recommendations that women police should become an integral part of the general police.
