I owe an unpayable debt to my mentor, Dr. S. L. Goel, Head, Public Administration Department, D.C.C., Panjab University. He proved to be a beacon guide to me. I acknowledge my sincerest thanks for his rare brilliance, gracious and ungrudging guidance, benevolent nature, and forbearance right from the beginning of my academic career to the completion of this research project. Really, few people have his ability to inspire and motivate others.

My fervent indebtedness is due to Prof. B. N. Choubey, an eminent scholar in the field of co-operative administration and at present, the Chief Executive, National Council for Co-operative Training, Delhi, for his erudite wisdom, stimulating advice, and professional involvement. Despite his onerous duties, he went through the manuscript and made critical comments. Prof. D. Jha, Director and Prof. G. S. Kamat, of Vaikunth Mehta National Institute of Co-operative Management, Pune, and Prof. B. S. Khanna, former Head of Public Administration Department (presently on foreign assignment), were good enough to go through some of the chapters. The author gratefully acknowledge their unerring guidance and deep insight.

I am obliged to Mr. Kriengkrai Klinoubol who has helped me in introducing to Opas Charernpakdi, Director, Department of Co-operatives Promotion, Ministry of Agriculture & Co-operation, Thailand, an eminent scholar in the field of co-operative administration and management. I am beholden to Opas Charernpakdi, for his patronage.

My glowing thanks are due to the Chief Executives of Hafed, Sarvshri R. D. Garg, IAS, Vishnu Bhagwan, IAS, Ranjit Issar, IAS, S. K. Maheshwari, IAS, and K. R. Punia, IAS (presently Registrar, Co-operative Societies), for their critical and useful discussions on the various problems of the thesis. My sincere appreciations are to all those who have extended their unstinted co-operation by offering free and frank discussion and enlightened views through questionnaire and personal interviews.

I wish to record my thanks to VMNICM, Pune, International Co-operative Alliance (Regional Office), National Co-operative Union of India, and Indian Institute of Public Administration at Delhi, and other apex federations in Haryana, for extending their full co-operation in collecting the data.

I am extremely grateful to my Director, Major Jiwan Tewari for his generosity in offering all possible help. I am also obliged to all my colleagues in the discipline of Public Administration especially Dr. S. K. Sharma, Chairman, Public Administration Department, who have lent big support, encouragement and invaluable guidance.

My sincere appreciations are to Sarvshri M. K. Gaur, N. R. Singh, G. Verma, S. Duggal, S. D. Sharma, R. K. Bansal and Dr. (Mrs.) Aruna Goel, mostly working in co-operative organisations, who have immensely contributed in bringing about the thesis in the present shape. I am grateful to my friend and colleague Pawan Kamra who provided constant assistance and advice.

I pay my respectful gratitude to my mother who has been my sole source of inspiration and by whose blessings and sacrifices, I have reached the present stage. Last but not the least, to my beloved wife Urmil Goel who has sustained me throughout to make the present study see light of the day.

BRIJ BHUSHAN

CHANDIGARH

April 24, 1981.