ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I have immense gratitude for Professor R. Indira – my Guide. She has been outstanding in her help and support. I deeply value her insightful guidance through which she has nurtured me as a researcher. She has shown me a kindness and compassion for which I am truly beholden. Dr Indira shall remain a continuing source of inspiration for me for her accomplishments as well as for her allegiance to the women’s question. Indeed it is my privilege to have her as mentor.

I am thankful to my research ‘networks’ from the IT Sector, and top executives of IT units who enabled my data collection from the industry and to all those who facilitated access to them. I wish to express my thanks to the authorities at the engineering college in Mysore that granted me permission to collect data from the students whom I thank as well for their enthusiastic participation.

To Brigadier R.V.Seetharamaiah, who gave me the plenteous measure of support through which to pursue this venture, and to my kin for sustaining in me the serenity to bear the vicissitudes of time, I stay profoundly indebted.

I would like to express my appreciation to the teaching faculty, office staff and research scholars at the Department of Studies in Sociology, University of Mysore for their support and cooperation. I am also thankful to the staff at the University Library and office for their unhesitating assistance.

Finally, I wish to thank all my friends for their unceasing encouragement and kindness.
