Acknowledgement

The present study is an attempt for exploring the status of tribal teachers in Assam and West Bengal. The study was carried out under the expert supervision of Dr. Nikunja Behari Biswas (Reader in the department of Education, Assam University, Silcher, Assam) and Dr. Dibakar Kundu (Reader, Vinaya Bhavana – The faculty of Education, Visva Bharati, Santiniketan; & Council member, ICSSR). The investigator likes to convey his gratitude to Dr. Biswas and Dr. Kundu for their constant supervision and active guidance without which the study would not have been completed.

The investigator is also thankful to the experts who gave useful suggestions from time to time for the purpose of developing and standardizing various tools and acted as major source of data; the education officers at the state as well as at district level; inspectors of schools (S.E.), NGO's and school authorities from the states – Assam and West Bengal for their kind cooperation.

The investigator takes the opportunity to acknowledge the field-assistants who helped the researcher for collecting the filled-up tools; the library-staffs of various libraries at Silchar, Gwahati, Santiniketan, Sriniketan, Alipur, Calcutta and Delhi – who extended their hands of cooperation for the shake of the present research.

Acknowledgement is due to the respondent tribal teachers and community members from the various tribes at Assam and West Bengal, who spend their valuable time, cooperated to work freely in the indigenous societies, discussed about research interests in specific and about the 'field' in general – which surely had an important impact on his own thinking and obviously over this thesis.

During the last four years, the researcher came across a number of persons who, though may not directly, however indirectly helped the researcher for the present study. The researcher wish to acknowledge all of them from the core of his heart.
It is a customary to acknowledge the continuous and traumatic routine association of the valued colleagues, within and outside the department of Education at the Assam University, who also contributed, may be, in the form of criticism, to bring 'perfection' of the study. The investigator is also debtful to his teachers, Prof. D.P. Mukherjee, Prof. Sukhen Das, Prof. Subhrangshu Sarkar, Dr. M.R. Banerjee, Prof. (Ms) Arati Sen, Prof. Nrisingha Banerjee, Dr. Sambhucharan Roy, Dr. Namita Das and also to Prof. Tarun Ranjan Banerjee, Dr. P.C. Biswas, Prof. Patitpaban Som, Prof. R.P. Singh, Prof. S. Aluwwallia, Prof. G. Biswas, Prof. Ranadhir Bhattacharya, Prof. Maloy Basu and Prof. K.P. Nath - who enlightened the investigator about various aspects of the discipline.

The investigator also likes to express his heartful thanks to his betterhalf, Anjana for her patience and bearing with him for neglect of his family responsibility during the entire period of research.

Lastly he wants to mention the silent and omnipresent inspiration of his deceased mother. Her blessing is the cosmic force compelled the investigator to complete the present study.
