Acknowledgement

It is indeed a privilege on my part to thank my supervisor, Dr. Parag Moni Sarma, presently Reader, Department of Cultural Studies, Tezpur University for initiating me into the domain of North East studies and making this research work possible. The work would not have been accomplished without his personal, intellectual and sympathetic help. At a time when I was groping for a suitable research proposal, Dr. Sarma encouraged me to take up a subject related to the North East, to portray a different facet of the region vis-a-vis the Indian mainstream. The exploration of some Assamese novels in an attempt to construct and demarcate a North East narrative, was not only a virgin area but challenging in so far as my poor knowledge and understanding of the Assamese language is concerned. The encouragement, inspiration and guidance of Dr. Sarma rendered to me during the perusal of the research is indeed immense and cannot be adequately articulated in words. I thank him for the same.

My special thanks goes to Dr. Dipankar Purkayastha, Professor, Department of English, Assam University for providing the necessary details and the critical approaches with which I should proceed with the research work. I am deeply indebted to him for his valuable comments, suggestions and critical insights and also for his personal interest in my work.

I take the opportunity to thank all the faculty members of the Department of English, Assam University, who have collectively contributed to my research in the form of valuable comments and suggestions, especially during the periodical seminars.
It gives me great honour to thank Dr. Sunil Kumar Dutta, Professor and Head, Department of Cultural Studies, Tezpur University for taking keen interest in my work and for encouraging me. I am also deeply indebted to all faculty members of the Department of Cultural Studies, Tezpur University who extended all possible help during the few days I spent at Tezpur during the last phase of my research. I am indeed grateful to them not only for their warmth and affection but also for making my stay in Tezpur pleasing, memorable and academically interesting.

I will be failing in my duty if I do not thank Shri Yeshe Dorje Thongchi, Secretary, Culture and Tourism, Govt. of Arunachal Pradesh for providing me with valuable inputs regarding his two fictional works which form a part of this research, whenever I contacted him.

My thanks are also due to my family members — my mother, wife and daughter who contributed in various ways to make the research work possible by providing me with the necessary impetus needed for such work and relaxation from household duties. I owe a special thanks to my daughter, now four year old, Padmakshi who demonstrated to me the beauty of creation and who peppered up my work with her innocent frolics — often interested in nothing but in father's pens and the drafts of the research work. I must here also acknowledge the help and support of my wife Dipali who sympathetically endorsed the marital adjustments I had to make to complete the research work within scheduled time.

I owe a special debt to Shri Dipan Chakraborty of “Nicety Graphics” for taking care of the typing, computer editing and printing of the manuscript, and for the nitty-gritties associated with bringing out the thesis in its final shape.
