FOREWORD

Sri P.C. Panigrahi, Lecturer in History, Anchal College, Padampur worked under my guidance and supervision for last three years on the problem of "THE BRITISH POLICY TOWARDS SAMBALPUR DURING 19th CENTURY". His research ranged from the early part of 19th century to the end of the same. The detail deliberation of the scholar is very much justified because Sambalpur was the last to be occupied by the British though Orissa was ceded to them in 1803. Sri Panigrahi has worked in important Archives of India including the National Archives, New Delhi and the State Archives, Bhubaneswar and has collected sufficient number of original records on the basis of which he has compiled this thesis. His dependence on the secondary sources is less than that on the original sources. He is a clear thinking scholar and the work is mostly the product of his own labour and research.
