ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am deeply indebted to Mrs. Roda Mistry, Member of Parliament and President, Indian Council of Social Welfare for granting me permission to take up this research project, and extending the necessary facilities at the College of Social Work, Hyderabad (a constituent of ICSW); and Dr. H. H. Narulasiddhaiah, Professor and Head, Department of Social Work, Bangalore University, for suggesting Karnataka University and Dr. C. S. Sidarakoppa for Doctoral Registration.

I am extremely grateful to Dr. C. S. Sidarakoppa, Reader and Head, Department of Post Graduate Studies in Social Work, Karnataka University, for accepting me as a research student and stimulating and sharpening my approach throughout the period of study; and Mrs. Sidarakoppa, his wife, for accommodating, with hospitality, research-related discussions at their home.

My gratitude is due to Dr. S. V. Raghavendra Rao, Reader in Sociology, Osmania University, for developing my insights into the problem in the prephase of the study; Dr. V. K. Ladda, Principal, College of Social Work, Osmania University, for going through the parameters and the statistical tools constructed for this study; and the 'Respondents', anonymous as they remain, for answering all my queries.

My great debt is to Mrs. Misha Bao, my wife, formerly Head, Women's Development Programme, Andhra Pradesh Social Services Society, Secunderabad, for her lively discussions, purposeful encouragement and assistance in preparing the bibliography; Mr. Kishen Chander, a dear friend, who burned midnight oil with me throughout the writing-phase, for typing most of the first drafts; and Dr. B.N. Koul, Reader and Head, Department of Correspondence Courses, The Central Institute of English and Foreign Languages, Hyderabad, for going through each word that I produced.

I must thank Research Fellows Ms. G.K. Aruna, Department of Geography, Osmania University, and Mr. Sunirmal Mandal, Faculty of Social Sciences, Nagpur University, for assistance in the areas of cartography and tabulation; the Staff of the College of Social Work, Hyderabad, for accommodating my absence from teaching and field work schedules; and the Students of the College of Social Work in general, and Jayaram Rao, Kanaklatha, Sunita and Swarna Megha Shyam in particular for their forbearance.
Finally, I must thank Mrs. D.P. Sarma, Assistant, GIEE, for taking up the massive task of deciphering what I wrote and preparing the final typescript in record time.

Hyderabad

19701018

at Dharwad.

P. VENKAT RAO