PREFACE

The present research on "The Havyaka Dialect of North Kanara" was undertaken in 1956 under the guidance of Prof. T. N. Sreekantaiya, who was then the Head of the Department of Kannada in the Karnataka University. The collection of extensive material by actual field-work itself took about the first three years. Although the work of analysis and writing was continuing under the guidance of Prof. Sreekantaiya even after his leaving the Karnataka University, the thesis could not be completed due to various unavoidable circumstances. I was, therefore, kindly permitted by the Karnataka University to work under Dr. R.C. Hiremath, Professor and Head of the Department of Kannada, Karnataka University and complete the thesis.

I am very much grateful to Prof. T. N. Sreekantaiya, Mysore for having encouraged me to take up the subject for research and having given me useful and sound guidance, particularly on fixing and describing the phonemes of the dialect and finding the development of the dialect from a historical point of view. The thesis was later revised, to give a consistent descriptive treatment, under the guidance of Dr. Hiremath. I am really greatly indebted to him for having given me the right approach in the descriptive technique adopted in this study. I cannot also sufficiently express my thanks to him for the enlightenment and affection I have received at his hands while working for this thesis.

But all this would not have been possible if the Karnataka
University had not kindly given me extensions of time to enable me to complete the thesis, whenever I sought it due to some setback or the other. I am, therefore, much beholden to the Authorities of the University for their kind solicitude in this matter.

I shall be failing in my foremost duty if I do not mention my thanks to the various informants who provided me with the material to work upon, and to other students and friends of mine who helped me during the field-work. Last, but not the least, I have great pleasure to express my sincere thanks to Shri R. B. Jalisatgi of Kumta, who readily undertook and successfully completed for me the typing work of this thesis, in spite of its very exacting nature.

Kumta.

K. G. Shastri.