ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I consider it my duty to place on record my grateful thanks to all those who have helped me in successfully completing this work. While I sit to recollect the most important amongst them, quite a few intellectuals and institutions come to crowd my memory. It is a very difficult task indeed to reasonably evaluate the help, assistance and guidance rendered by them. And moreover, many of them wish to remain anonymous. But academic decency demands that I mention at least a few names which stand out as very near and dear.

To mention only a few to whom I owe a special debt of gratitude, I must begin with Dr. M.C. Kodli, under whose able guidance and supervision this thesis was prepared, and for whose help that transcends the confines of the norms of his accredited duties, I am deeply indebted. He did instill in me the much needed confidence, particularly at times when it threatened to desert me. And had it not been for his personal interest and perseverance, I would not have completed the task so easily. I owe to him all my unqualified gratitude.
I had the rare privilege of getting the kind counsel of the outstanding academics of the Centre of Advanced Study in Economics, Bombay, particularly of Dr. P.R. Brahmananda, Dr. J.C. Sandesara, Dr. P.R. Panchamukhi and Dr. S.P. Goswami during my stay at the Centre as a short term visiting fellow in 1983. They were kind enough to give me the much needed direction besides exposing me to the subtler aspects of research in Industrial Economics. I am highly indebted to them.

I am highly grateful to Dr. Abdul Aziz, Dr. (Mrs.) Hemalata Rao and Dr. R.S. Deshpande of the Institute for Social and Economic Change Bangalore, but for whose constant encouragement, suggestions and advice, I would not have completed my task in time. As a recipient of their unconditional help, I do find the influence of the valuable guidance of Dr. Abdul Aziz and Dr. R.S. Deshpande in almost every chapter of this work. I thank them very sincerely.

My well-wishers and academic associates, Dr. H. Basanna, Dr. R.V. Desibhavi, Dr. M.S. Kallur and Professor B.M. Kerkadli, richly deserve my grateful thanks for their continual encouragement and assistance. I am indebted to them.

Special mention is to be made of the tiring task of going through the manuscripts by Mr. M. Thangaraj, Mr. Rajasekaran... and Mr. Selvaraj, Ph.D., fellows of the Institute for Social and Economic Change, Bangalore. I did receive a lot of research assistance from Mr. A.M. Jose, Mr. Jose Thomas, Mr. Mohan sundaram and Mr. Gopinath Reddy of the same institute. I am thankful to all these young intellectuals.

Mr. S. Pannuraj and Mr. A. Rudragouda, Chartered Accountants, Bellary, very richly deserve my gratitude. They helped me at all the stages of data processing and analysis. They really did a wonderful job for which I can only say a very big 'Thank You'.

Mr. M.B. Goud, Director of District and Regional Planning and Mr. K. Sankar Rao, Research Officer, Special Studies Division, Department of Planning, Bangalore did their best to procure and supply most of the data required for my work. The other gentlemen who helped me in the collection of data are Mr. Basavarajappa, Joint Director, and Mr. Manu, Deputy Director of the Directorate of Economics and Statistics, and Mr. Raghavendra Rao of the Census Directorate, Bangalore. I thank all of them very sincerely.

Libraries have a definite and determinate role in every research endeavour. In this regard, I must say with all sincerity that had it not been for the assistance I received from the Librarians of the libraries of Karnatak University, Bombay University, Madras University, ISEC, RBI and IDBI, my present work would not have acquired the academic authenticity which it has now. I am ever grateful to them and their staff.

Amongst the hundreds of individuals that crowd the columns of my memory in connection with my research endeavour, two of my colleagues, Mr. P. Gurubasappa and Mr. S. Jayanna, figure very distinct and significant. If at all I could get relief from the diverse academic and mundane problems, it was only through the ready and unsolicited help that came to me from these two friends of mine, I am deeply indebted to them.

My sincere thanks are due to Mr. Narayan of ISEC, Bangalore and Mr. S.B. Pawar of Karnatak University, Dharwad for doing the important job of typing the thesis well in time.

And finally, in a sentimental mood, I do feel that I would not have achieved anything worth in the academic field without the sacrifices made by my wife Smt. B. Padmavathi. At the same time I cannot afford to forget the humble assistance rendered to me by my children, Madhavi, Ravi, Raghu and Giri. I thank my wife and children with all love and affection.
