ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

It is my pleasure to put on record my appreciation and thanks to the various individuals and institutions that have helped me directly or indirectly in the completion of the various phases of the work of my PhD thesis. I express my gratitude to my guide, Dr. V. S. Patil, Reader in Political Science, Karnataka University, Dharwad, for giving me guidance and advice on the various aspects of the work. Similarly I am grateful to Dr. A. M. Rajasekhariah, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Political Science, Karnataka University, Dharwad, and Dr. F. T. Jangam, Professor of Political Science, Karnataka University, Dharwad, for their suggestions in connection with my work. I must thank my brother, Dr. S. C. Kendodamath, Assistant Librarian, Karnataka University Library, Dharwad, for giving me assistance in finding references and compiling bibliography. The staff of the two big libraries, the Banaras Hindu University Library, Banaras, and the Karnataka University Library, Dharwad, have been of immense help to me and it is my pleasant duty to thank them all. My thanks go out to all those interviewees, some of whom are mentioned in the thesis, for sparing much of their valuable time and favouring me with their interviews, books and other literature. I must put on record my thanks to the heirs and publishers of Acharya Kripalani whose books and other literature I have consulted in the preparation of the thesis. Prof. B.B. Hunagund, retired Reader in Library Science, Karnatak University, Dharwad, has given me valuable assistance in comparing and checking the manuscript and the typescript of my work. Finally, I thank all those individuals or institutions that I may have failed to cite here inadvertently.
