ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The first and foremost person who deserves my gratitude is Prof. Y.L. Inamdar Reader, Department of Studies in Economics, Karnataka University, Dharwad, who proved himself to be a guide in the true sense of the term by his loving guidance, gracious inspiration and by instilling confidence in me.

Worship without deity is inconceivable. This academic pursuit would have been inconceivable without the Lokapur Cement Plant, the presiding deity of my thesis under reference. I take this opportunity to thank the Lokapur Cement Plant for all its kindness and unstinted co-operation.

I cannot help recording my sincere thanks to Mr. S.T. Patil, Ex.-M.P., the Ex-Chairman of the Lokapur Cement Plant and to Mr. D.M. Desai, Ex.-Managing Director of the Lokapur Cement Plant; for their kind co-operation by placing all the requisite data at my disposal.

Mr. Aravind Jawalkar, the present Chairman of the Lokapur Cement Plant deserves my sincere thanks for his ready help from time to time in collecting the necessary data.

The Cement Research Institute of India (CRI) equipped me with all the required matter on Mini Cement plants and as such this esteemed organisation, Dr. H.C. Visveswarayya, Mr. N.L. Laxmanmurty, the Library Staff in particular, deserve my hearty thanks on that account.
My wild dream namely this thesis has been translated into reality solely by my benign management which permitted me to pursue and succeed in this mighty academic enterprise. I, hereby, register my profound gratitude to Mr. Prabhakar Kore, M.P., Chairman, K.L.E. Society, Belgaum, for his benevolence showered on me. I may be failing in my duty in case I forget to thank Principal S.B. Patil, Secretary, K.L.E. Society, Belgaum, for the kind permission granted to me to undertake this thesis.

The Ex-Principals of my college, Sri. C.V. Mathad and Sri. L. S. Naik, should claim my hearty thanks for backing me up in this academic pursuit.

Mr. M. R. Ullegaddi, the present Principal and the Life Member of K.L.E. Society, Belgaum, richly deserves my heartfelt thanks for his constant encouragement. I also thank the staff of my college for their help and co-operation.

My esteemed Professors, Dr. M. A. Adhoni, Chairman and Professor of the Dept. of Studies in Economics, Dr. M. C. Kadli, Professor of Economics and my other teachers in the Department of Economics of the Karnataka University, Dharwad, will be kind enough to accept my thanks which I extend in this context.

Mr. Anand L. Potnis of Gadag, Mr. H. S. Naiker of Lokapur Mr. Tigadi of Saundatti, Mr. Ashok A. Ghaligi of Hubli and good many others deserve my hearty thanks for their helping hand.
My thanks are due to Prof. M.N. Joshi, Prof. & Head, Department of Sanskrit, Karnataka College, Dharwad, for wading through the entire stream of this thesis fishing for linguistic discrepancies.

On personal record, I thank my parents for their inspiring blessings on this enterprise as throughout my life. I must thank Mrs. Madhavi Mulgund, my better half, who induced me to run on this academic pursuit and whose co-operation has stood me in good stead.

My thanks are due to Dr. S.C. Kendadamath of the Karnataka University Library for ideally arranging the bibliography of my thesis, Mr. Dayanand Bhat of Dharwad for his neat xeroxing and M/S Mrtyunjaya Book Binding Works of Dharwad for prompt and attractive binding of this thesis.

I thank Mr. P.J. Desai, Dharwad, who has brought out this academic child from the womb of computer on which he lovingly operated!

My thanks are due to all those who have rendered help, guidance and unstinted co-operation directly or indirectly and whom I have forgotten to mention here.
