I wish to express my deep sense of gratitude to the Almighty God who manifested himself through teachers, parents, family members, well wishers and friends who guided and helped me throughout my assignment.

The foremost of all, I owe a deep sense of gratitude to my guide, Dr. A. S. Kabbur, Principal, Government First Grade College, Mundgod, for his constant encouragement, intellectual inspiration and enlightened guidance at different stages of the work. Inspite of his busy academic and administrative schedule, he has always been kind enough to spare time to help me to complete this uphill task.

I am grateful to the authorities of UGC, South Western Regional Office, Gandhinagar, and Bangalore for awarding me Teacher Fellowship for doing Ph.D. under Faculty Improvement Programme (FIP) Scheme during Tenth Plan period. I am equally grateful to my college Management President, Members, Principal and all Staff for providing me necessary facilities to complete research.

I am highly obliged to my professor late Dr. R.T. Jangam for his valuable suggestions in preparation of thesis. I am equally thankful to Chairman and all the teachers, Department of Studies in Political Science, Karnataka University Dharwad, for their help and cooperation.
