ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I remain grateful to Dr. C.V. Venugopal, Professor and Chairman, Department of English, Karnatak University, Dharwad, for guiding me in the preparation of this thesis. This thesis would not have taken the present form without his assistance and encouragement as my guide.

I express my profound indebtedness to Professor S.R. Narayan Rao, who retired on 31 May 1995 as Principal of Dr. A.V. Baliga College of Arts and Science, Kumta, for being a source of inspiration in my life. He suggested the present title of the research project, and also enlightened me on the theme of the research project.

I am thankful to Dr. K. Raghavendra Rao, Professor of Political Science (retd.), and an Indian-English poet who helped me in making a systematic study of the problem of research by discussion, suggestions and division of the subject into chapters.

I remember with thanks Professor K.S. Deshpande, former Chief Librarian of Karnatak University Library, Dharwad for introducing me to Prof. A.C. Tikekar, University Librarian, Bombay and Mrs. Jyoti Makhiza, Librarian, British Library, Bangalore.
I take this opportunity to express my indebtedness to Prof. A.C. Tikekar, University Librarian and the members of the staff of J.N. Library, University of Bombay for their help.

I express my gratitude to Mrs. Jyoti Makhiza, Librarian, British Library, Bangalore, for lending me The Collected Essays, Journalism and Letters of George Orwell.

I thank the librarians of Karnatak University, Dharwad, for their co-operation.

I am indebted to Mr. S.P. Kamat, Chairman, Kanara Welfare Trust, Professor and Principal G.V. Bhat (retd.) and the incumbent principal, my colleagues and the office staff at Divekar College of Commerce, Karwar, for enabling me to come on deputation to Karnatak University, Dharwad, for completion of my research project.

My thanks are due to all writers and publishers whose books I have used as sources in the course of this study. I thank all others who have helped me in actualising one of the ideals of my life.
