ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I acknowledge my deep sense of gratitude, to my Guide, Dr. N.S. Hiremath, Professor of Economics, whose constant inspiration, encouragement, guidance, help and supervision throughout have enabled me to produce this piece of work.

I have had the benefit of undergoing six weeks' Research Methodology Course organised by Sardar Patel Institute of Economic Research, Ahmedabad, and sponsored by the Indian Council of Social Science Research, New Delhi, in 1981. During 17th February 1982 to 30th March 1982, I also had the benefit of visiting Bombay as a Visiting Fellow of the IFCI - Unit in the Department of Economics. I am thankful to the ICSSR, New Delhi, and IFCI - Unit in the Department of Economics, Bombay, for awarding me the Fellowship. I had the opportunity of having discussion with eminent faculty members of Sardar Patel Institute of Economic Research, Ahmedabad, the Department of Economics and Department of Geography, University of Bombay, and officials of Regional and Backward Area Development Department of the Industrial Development Bank of India.

I thank all those government officials, who supplied me with the required information or material, more particularly the Planning Department, Bureau of Economics and Statistics of the Government of Karnataka, Director of Census Operations, Bangalore, and also other experts in this interdisciplinary field with whom I had useful discussion about my problem.

I thank the Librarians and their staff of Karnataka University, Dharwad, Sardar Patel Institute of Economic Research, Ahmedabad, University of Bombay, Bombay, Reserve Bank of India, Bombay, National Institute of Bank Management, Bombay, Industrial Development Bank of India, Regional Economics Wing of the Commerce Research Bureau, Bombay, Administrative Training Institute, Mysore and United States Information Center, Madras, for their kind co-operation in the pursuit of the present study.

I am specially thankful to the United Nations Economics and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, Bangkok who supplied me with some reports of the United Nations concerned with my work.

My special thanks are also due to Shri C.R.Chikkamath, Deputy Commissioner, Belgaum, and Shri G.A.Adagatti, Assistant Commissioner, Bailhongal, for their encouragement and co-operation.
