ABSTRACT

The emergence of Social Science as a distinct group of subjects in the universe of subjects is traced. The disciplinewise, the methodologywise, organisationalwise are presented for Indian environment. Ranganathan's theory of Analytico synthetic approach is delineated and its ramifications to facet analysis of international relations and Labour relations are studied. Comparative analysis of the study presents a kind of common framework that are possible to interconnect the fields in Social Sciences. This study presents a indepth analysis of the subject Labour relations in the idea plane and provides a classification schedule and set of sample examples for classification and indexing in the subjects. On the whole this thesis presents the versatality in the approach of the analytico synthetic classification of Ranganathan.