Acknowledgement

The present study would not have been possible without the direction and guidance from my supervisor Dr. Tarun Kumar Mondal, Assistant Professor and Head of the Department, Department of Geography, University of Kalyani. Only now I am starting to understand how much I am indebted to him for everything.

I must pay my deepest gratitude to Prof. Subhas Chandra Mukhopadhyay, Professor (Retd.), Department of Geography, University of Calcutta, Prof. Ranjan Basu, Professor, Department of Geography, University of Calcutta, Prof. Sukla Bhaduri Professor (Retd.), Department of Geography, University of Calcutta, Paramita Roychowdhury, Assistant Professor, Department of Geography, Krishnagar Government College and Dr. Indira Sarajdar (Gangopadhyay), Head of the Department and Assistant Professor, Department of Geography, Barrackpore Rastraguru Surendranath College for their valuable suggestions which enrich my study in various ways.

I also offer my sincere gratitude to Dr. Premangshi Chakrabarty, former Head of the Department, Department of Geography, University of Kalyani and Dr. Abhay Sankar Sahu, Assistant Professor, Department of Geography, University of Kalyani for their continuous encouragement to complete my work.

I also thank to all the staff members and my fellow research scholars of the Department of Geography, University of Kalyani for their constant cooperation.

I owe specific thanks to Atanu Kumar Ghosh, Fellow Research Scholar, Indian Statistical Institute, Kolkata, whose insightful questions skilled me to question and to think more profoundly.

I thank to Deepak Kumar Shil, Librarian, SIPRD, Government of West Bengal, Kalyani, Nadia, West Bengal for his continuous support to widen my vision during literature survey.

I do not have words to sufficiently narrate my deep gratefulness for my parents and my elder brother who supported me throughout my educational years.

Special thanks are owed to all the respondents in my study area and all the persons who helped me throughout my study, both ethically and morally.

Finally, I am also highly grateful and acknowledge to the University of Kalyani for providing scholarship and given opportunity to conduct this work as a University Research Scholar. Without this financial assistance, I would not have been able to complete this work.
