

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It gives me an immense pleasure to present this thesis which is a result of my relentless efforts and guidance, advice and help of so many eminent personalities, my friends and family members.

I take this opportunity to express my deep gratitude towards the Ph. D section of University of Pune and Prin. N.G Naralkar Institute of Career Development and Research, Pune for offering me an opportunity to do my doctoral research work. My heartfelt thanks to Dr. G. K Shirude, Director, Prin. N. G Naralkar Institute of Career Development and Research for his valuable guidance and help. I shall always remember his words that there is no alternative to quality work.

I am falling short of words in expressing my gratitude and thanks to my honorable guide Dr. V. H. Inamdar for his continuous guidance and help during the research. He acted as a light house during the entire research work and put me on right direction to achieve the objectives of the research I shall never forget the concern he showed in timely completion of my work and thesis. This would not be possible without his continuous and timely reminders at every stage of the research work. He is more than a guide for me, a teacher and a philosopher.

My sincere thanks to Ms. Tarita Shankar, Chairperson, Prof. Chetan Wakalkar – Group Director of Indira Group of Institutes, Pune and Dr. (Mrs.) Prachee Javadekar, Director, Indira Institute of Management, Pune for their cooperation in allowing me to work on my Ph.D research and granting me leaves whenever requested.
