ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

To my supervisor, Dr. T. Prabhakar, Professor and Head, Department of English, University of Madras, I owe deep gratitude. His patience, encouragement, and utmost consideration helped to see this project to completion.

To Dr. Malcolm Bosse, Fulbright Visiting Scholar of American Literature at Madras, 1978-80, who advised persistence in researching the relatively little worked fiction of J.F. Powers; and to my former teacher Dr. Kathleen Healy, Carlow College, Pittsburgh, for wholehearted efforts to locate copies of Powers' out of print collections, I owe thanks.

A U.G.C. Fellowship (1978-81), the first awarded for research in English at the University of Madras, financed this project. The American Studies Research Centre, Hyderabad provided assistance through its special programs for visits to the Library in 1978-79.

The A.S.R.C. Hyderabad, Hansa Mehta Library, Baroda, Madras University Library, American Library, Madras, provided access to microfilms, xeroxes, journals, anthologies, and collections for alternate sources of Powers' work.

I am grateful also, to Dr. C.T. Indra, Department of English, University of Madras for reading through the manuscript; to my typist, Mr. Sadasivam; and to friends and family members for measureless support.