ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to Professor Swapna Devi Bhattacharjee, former Dean, Rabindranath School of Indian Languages and Cultural Studies, for her immense faith and interest in my successful completion of the PhD project. Her continual help, particularly during the IPP Coursework, made things easy for me. My thanks are due also to Dr. Bela Das, and Dr. Biswatosh Choudhury, consecutive HODs, Dept. of Bengali, who welcomed me into the fold of the department and encouraged my efforts in comparative study. Prof. Rama Bhattacharjee, the present Dean of the school, and many other faculties, as well as non-teaching staffs, of the department have shown interest in the progress of my project. My due thanks to all of them. Besides, I owe my thanks to many others. Among them mention must be made of Lakshmee, Kanai, Mrinal, Mrityunjoy, and such other co-researchers for their help and timely support. Staffs of National Library, Kolkata, and Central Library, Assam University, have been of great help and should receive thanks from me. Pinaki Das and his Quality Graphics have cooperated with me to a great extent to make works of printing and binding almost hassle-free. My sincere thanks to them.

I owe to my supervisor everything that he has openly and without any reserve provided to me, including use of his family library. No words of gratitude would suffice here. My parents are my ideals of broadness and expansion in life. To them I am indebted in everything. My two brothers have at times worked no less than my own two hands, besides encouraging me on a regular basis. My loving thanks to them. At last, I would be failing in my loving duty if I do not mention of my wife who has been the one to motivate me at the outset for PhD. I owe much to her.
