This thesis entitled, “Infrastructure for Rural Development – A Comparative Development in Dakshina Kannada District” is prepared by me as part of the requirements of my Ph.D Degree in Economics from Mangalore University.

First and foremost, I thank the Almighty for giving me the opportunity and strength to do the doctorate studies.

Several persons and institutions, have individually have helped in me in various ways in my work. I wish to thank them all.

I express my sincere thanks to Dr. G.V. Joshi, Professor and Chairman, Department of Studies and Research in Economics, Mangalore University for patiently and caring guiding me in this research. In him I have found a complete teacher in the sense of being a friend, philosopher and guide. From him I have received inspiration, encouragement and direction for my academic exercises. I am indebted to him, greatly.

I acknowledge the assistance received from the University Grants Commission (UGC), Government of India, New Delhi and its Regional Office, Bangalore in the form of Teacher Fellowship for two years. I also thank, the Joint Director of Collegiate Education, Government of Karnataka; Mangalore University; and the Principals and Management of St Aloysius College as well as St Aloysius Evening College, Mangalore for the help and cooperation in this regard.

I thank the administrative staff of Mangalore University, of the Department of Department of Studies and Research in Economics, Mangalore
University, and of St Aloysius Evening College for extending to me the necessary help.

I am grateful to Dr. Jayasheela, Reader in Economics, Mangalore University for his help in more ways than one. I am thankful to Prof. Vishwanath, Prof. P.A. Rego, Dr. U. Arabi and Dr. Sripathi K. for giving me their suggestions whenever, I approached them.

I remember with gratitude the help received from the Librarians and library staff of Mangalore University, Mangalagangothri; St Aloysius College, St Aloysius Evening College, St Aloysius Institute of Social Work, Mangalore; Institute for Economic and Social Change (ISEC), Bangalore and T.A. Pai Management Institute, Manipal for providing me access to the much needed secondary data for my research. I also thank the officials and support staff at the Governmental and Non-governmental Organisations that I visited in connection with my research work.

I would be failing in my duty if I do not thank my colleagues and friends at St Aloysius institutions for their cooperation, on and off the campus.

I must thank my students of who have shown keen interest in my work. A number of my old students deserve my appreciation for their willingness to learn with me the task of primary data collection. They have virtually taken me to and through the villages, fed with me food for thought and thesis. For all this and more, I shall ever remain grateful to them. The work of this nature and size, would not have been possible, but for the empathy of the respondents. They were very accommodative. Their patience during long hours of interaction and stay (some times overnight) was a stimulant for me. They were indeed very responsive and responsible respondents. I thank them profusely.
I thank my mother who with her undiminishng care and concern – even during times of her severe illness – has kept me going. I am also thankful to my wife and daughter for giving the necessary fillip in the family. I also thank my brothers and sisters and all other relatives and friends for their affection and support to me.

I express my gratitude to Rev. Dr. John S. Sadananda, Principal Karnataka Theological College, Mangalore and President, Senate of Serampore College, West Bengal; Rev. I.L. Soans and Rev. S.D. Aiman, Presbyters of CSI Shanthi Cathedral, Mangalore; Rev. Dr. Honey Cabral, Faculty, KTC, and several others for their goodwill towards me.

I thank my friends Mr. Prabhuswamy and Lingaraju, ISEC, Bangalore; Ms. Divya, Dr. Krishna Kumar, Mangalore University; and Dr. Suresh and Ms. Sucharitha Suresh, and Mr. Rajesh Heri for helping me in my endeavours.
