Acknowledgements

If I could walk on the path of knowledge so far, is because of a vision, strong support of loved ones, friends and blessings of all elderly family members. I take this opportunity to acknowledge my gratitude to everyone who has selflessly helped me, without them I would not have been able to accomplish my work this far.

At this juncture, first and foremost, I am indebted to my guide, Dr. Sanjay K. Juvekar for his unending support, tireless efforts, and proactive guidance through all these years of my Ph.D. A true mentor and a motivator. His continuous and unprejudiced trust helped to mold me as a student. His values, dedication and patience taught me that everything comes to those who can wait. I was fortunate to have him as my guide. I pay special respect towards him for nurturing my research skills, in imbibing in me all true virtues, which a student must retain; they will remain with me lifetime. I would not have been able to aspire for a doctorate without his motivation. He guided me inexorably throughout the five years of my Ph.D. My special thanks to Mr. Naresh Singh for proof reading the doctoral thesis on a very short notice.

I thank Dr. Hemant Apte, a renowned anthropologist and a senior social scientist for his inputs in developing my study proposal. I also thank Dr. Anita Kar, Associate Professor, SHS, for her advice, eight years back to pursue Ph.D. for advancement in my career. Her timely advice inspired me to register for my Ph.D.

My special thanks Dr. R. Gangakhedkar, Director, In-charge, NARI for his valuable pieces of advice in my Ph.D. study. His unfathomable encouragement supported me to overcome many obstacles in pursuit of field work in the red light area. I also thank Dr. Nikhil Gupte, Biostatistician, BJGMC for his guidance in statistical sample calculation of the study. I am grateful to Dr. Donald Morris’ constructive suggestions in development of my study tools; his prompt email guidance was commendable. I sincerely thank Dr. Vasudeo Parlikar, a senior psychiatrist, KEM and Dr. Ujjawal Nene, psychologist, KEM, Ankita Deshmukh, psychologist for bestowing their technical guidance in development of a tool, to measure female sex workers’ attitudes towards condom use.

My special thanks to Head of the Department of Anthropology, Dr. Anjali Kurane for her support and encouragement throughout my study. I also thank faculty of Department of Anthropology, Dr. Ram Gambhir, Dr. John Gaikwad for teaching us course work. I also thank Abhijeet, Mr. Shinde, for their prompt administrative support.

Lastly, I take this opportunity to pay my gratitude to my beloved husband Nitin Gore. His selfless love and indepth trust in me motivated me to keep going. Without his patient companionship, I would not have not been in a position to accomplish this endeavor. My daughters Gargi and Maitryee who light up my life every single day. I am very grateful to my mother who supported me unconditionally in my career, her simplicity and honesty taught me that it is utmost important to be a good human being first, before you mature as a professional.

I am indebted to my very close friends Uma and Lokesh, Anjali, Bharat for their strong support and for academic discussions, which helped me to grow as a researcher. They aptly justify the proverb “Life has no blessing like a prudent friend”. I also thank Prashant Kulkarni, Pooja Joshi, Srikant Reddy, Shantanu Ozarkar, Manjari, Preeti, Aarti and my friends for their support.

I am thankful to all my friends from KEMHRC, Vadu, Dheeraj, Pallavi, Veena, Vijendra, Bharat for their kindness and enthusiasm in always lending a supporting hand to me. My special thanks to Rutuja for her help in getting acquainted with techniques that sharpened my research skills.

I am very grateful to Parivartan organization for their willing approval for the sabbatical to complete my Ph.D. work. Special thanks to Dr. Amit Nulkar, psychiatrist for empathizing with me in tough situations.

I would not have been able to complete my fieldwork without Arunatai and Kamlatai’s help. They accompanied me to all field visits in the red light area. I am very grateful to them.

And above all, I am indebted to all my respondents who agreed to participate in this study. I am overwhelmed with their trust in me in sharing sensitive and personal information pertaining to the study.

The sudden death and loss of my father in 2004, led me to take my career seriously, he left an empty vacuum. I take this opportunity to “dedicate this thesis to my beloved father”.
