Acknowledgement

From the beginning till this date, there has been tremendous activity and many players who have made this study as good as it stands today. From the literature to the responses, pictures to the content, my heart goes out to all my friends in street vending and their support, for adding value that is difficult to quantify on print. While the contribution of many senior and junior faculty members are duly thanked, I would also like to include my family and friends without whom this study could have never been published. Here are some key people who cannot be missed from mention thus listed with no chronology in specific, as all of them played the best role in facilitating this study.

At the outset, I express my deepest sense of gratitude to my Guide Dr. Dhruba B Jyothi for being the backbone to this study by not only being the guide on research but also a friend. His direction and freedom of expression provided to his research students have complimented the efforts towards making this thesis meaningful and original. From the very first casual discussions to the focused suggestions his continuous support towards motivating and academically refreshing are heartily thanked.

On the same note, my acknowledgment to Karnataka University, Dharwad and in particular to The Department of Sociology for providing me the opportunity of registering my Ph.D work. My sincere appreciation to all members from the Department of Sociology, starting with my acknowledgement of special gratitude to Dr. C. A. Somashekarappa the then chairperson, Department of Sociology and current Registrar, Folklore University, Shiggav- Haveri for his incredible thought-provoking knowledge, commitment and continuous support from day one. Equally thanking all the very eminent chairpersons including Dr. C.S. Shettar for involving me most actively in the department with her special care and warmth, Dr. Shoukath Azim for guidance and academic support along with bringing smiles on our faces when we needed it the most and, Dr. Jayashree for inspiring commitment and providing right direction. I should acknowledge that with these special personal traits, their understanding of the subject matter, dedication to support research with depth of knowledge in Sociology and related sciences has helped me to be successful with this study.
My gratitude to my friend and senior Praveen Nayak from Saint Aloysius college, Mangalore for helping me re-connect with my guide and old friend Dr. Dhruva B Jyothi. Also my heartiest thanks to my Sociology mentor Dr. Richard Pais from Saint Aloysius College for supporting in every possible manner and bringing me up with sociological thoughts. I would also like to remember my first Sociology teacher Rev.
Alphonses (SJ) at Saint Aloysius pre-university college for teaching me the meaning and relevance of Sociology in this society.
It has also been a privilege to get and stay connected with veterans of Sociology whose contributions are highly regarded. My humble thanks to Dr. Jogan Shankar, the former Chairman, Department of Sociology & Social work, Mangalore University, Mangalore and Dr. S.L. Herimath. Registrar, Gulbarga University, Gulbarga and Dr.
Somashekarappa, Registrar, Folklore University, Shiggav- Haveri.
A word of gratitude to my good friends for pitching in to help with their contributions special thanks to Joyline Rodrigues, Srereekha and Shyamapad for literary support on editing. Thanks to my friend Puneet Singh from Position\(^2\) along with, Parameshwappa from Indian Academy, Aruna Kalkur – HOD, Department of Statistics, Saint Aloysius College and Dr. Venkatesh. Department of Statistics, KUD for helping me on statistical understanding.
This study has derived better value with my new friends from the street vending community and my sincere thanks goes to all of them without whom this study could never have happened, especially the many street vendors from Sunday Bazar who have whole heartedly supported me with information and accepted me as one whom they have full faith in, thus giving scope for closer observations and discussions. A strong mention of thanks to all street vendor leaders of Sunday Bazar Bengaluru, special mention of Akram and Adil for supporting me, when I needed them the most.
Gratefully thanking my research assistants Bala, Ravi, Suresh and Das on data collection, along with the greatest support coming from my best friend Joyline on literary, imaging and field support. My colleague and friend Mohan for reference support, my fellow research friends at KUD - Keerthi, Rekha, Balligar and all others for little things they did which helped a lot.

A word of gratitude to all my teachers from my play school to this date, who have academically reformed me with all support towards this research. A special mention to my very wonderful teacher Uday Kumar from SDM Law College, Mangalore for his selfless support without whom moving beyond academically would have been just a dream.

My gratitude and thanks to my spouse Shobha and my kid Steve for all the patience, tolerance and support towards me pursuing all studies till this date. Also thanking my sister Shilpa and brother-in-law Elwin for being there with me, throughout this journey. Last but not the least, the people whom I remain indebted to all my life for making me what I am today, my Mom Iris D’Souza and my Dad Richard D’Souza. Like all parents they have done the necessary and often gone beyond boundaries to make it happen for me. Thanks to dad for being my role model and thanks to mom for being there for me, every time.

Cheers and thanks to all, who have not been mentioned in person but remain in my heart and mind for their continued support. I wish and hope that this study does have an impact with necessary follow-up and action from all quarters, helping the biggest stakeholders - the street vendor.
