ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First of all, I thank the Almighty God for fulfilling my cherished desire to complete this thesis under his showered blessings.

As a student author of the present thesis, I am aware of the fastidious obligations, which I must acknowledge.

I, owe a special debt to my esteemed and distinguished guide, Dr. Dalip Malhotra, Professor and Chairman of the Psychology Department of Himachal Pradesh University, without whose directions and judicious guidance and counsel, this task would not have been completed. His contact has proved a boon for me. He opens a new vista of knowledge to the scholar.

I learnt a lot from my superb guide Dr. Dalip Malhotra who seems to be well-versed in various philosophical thoughts, knowledge of psychology, indepth study of literature and various scriptures.

His patience, industry and affection helped me much to go on with this difficult undertaking. He explained various concepts and gave invaluable insight while going through the entire manuscript. I am highly grateful to him for his gracious help in solving the problems which continued to arise during the period of this research work.
Inspite of his very busy schedule, it was always easy to have an access to him as he possesses so much of 'maitribhav' for one and all. No words can suffice to express my gratitude to him. I feel particularly fortunate in having worked under his able guidance and supervision as a research without an efficient guide is like a ship without a rudder. Thanks are also due to all the members of staff, Department of Psychology, Himachal Pradesh University, for their help on innumerable occasions that gave shape to my work.

My special thanks are due to Mrs. Susheela Sharma, Principal of St. Thomas School, her husband Mr. Anil Sharma for their immense help and inspiration, Mrs. Krishan Kanta Sharma and Miss Nirmala Chauhan for helping and encouraging me at every stage of the present work.

I am also indebted to Dr. (Mrs.) Asha Malhotra who held the umbrella of shelter and encouragement as she always does and will be remembered for her motherly affection.

Infact many persons contributed towards this thesis for which I am highly obliged to all of them especially Dr. (Mrs.) Abha Malhotra, who played a vital role as a proof reader of my thesis, Miss Neelam Bali, Mr. Tarkesh, Mr. Atul, Mr. Hemant, Mr. Amar, Mr. Sandeep and Mr. Deepak who gave me constant encouragement.
No expression of gratitude will be sufficient without recognizing the contribution of my parents Shrimati Padmawati Sharma and Shri Kewal Ram Sharma who catered to all my needs and necessities with their hard-earned money and their literary taste always encouraged me to reach this level.

I am also grateful to my sisters Sunita, Sarita and Veena, brothers Karan and Mohit, brother-in-law, Raj for their immense help and encouragement in completing this thesis.

Last, but not least my thanks are due to Smt. Krishna for her patience and flawless typing of my thesis.

To list all those who helped me in my work is impossible here. I thank them all sincerely. However, the responsibility for any errors that remain is all mine.

Thanks are also due to all the subjects who participated in this data collection without which, it would have not been possible to accomplish the present conclusion.

Himachal Pradesh University is also thanked for having awarded me a Research Fellowship to carry out the research work. Thanks are also due to the staff of Himachal Pradesh Library.

In the end, I would again like to thank my guide from the depth of my heart and salute him with reverence for his benevolent guidance, whole-hearted cooperation and continuous encouragement. His abundant love and grace will always be there with me to the last breath of my life. No words can suffice to express my gratitude to him. Again thanks to the Almighty God for giving me opportunity to work under such a precious and scholarly esteemed supervisor. I am overwhelmed with a sense of legitimate pride while working under him.

Place: Shimla.
Dated: November, 2000

(Anita Sharma)