Preface

THADOU OF MANIPUR: A SOCIOLOGICAL

Thadou is a scheduled tribe recognised by government of India, dated 29th October 1956. According to William Shaw, the Thadou are a sub group of the Kuki tribe of Manipur. They are the most numerous branch of the Kuki tribe. They live in different parts of North-East India and its neighboring countries like Myanmar and Bangladesh. They are dispersed in all the hill districts of Manipur, numbering 2,71274 of the total Manipur population of 2,721,756 according to 2011 census. Origin and migration of Thadou to Manipur are shrouded with folk and myth. According to Col. J. Shakespear the new Kuki clans migrated to Manipur in the 18th and 19th centuries A.D. British colonial writers describe them primitive, savage and backward. Thadou gradually established its identity, culture, religion and other allied aspects and came in contact with others- administrator, tribe and non-tribe people. However, a visible change is observed when British missionary introduced Christianity and education which brought change in custom, tradition and way of life of Thadou. But Christianity has not however alienated the Thadou-Kukis altogether from their traditional and cultural value. Hence the present study intends to investigate about the present scenario of Thadou of Manipur in terms of their socio-economic, education and cultural life. In this work use of the terminology ‘Kuki’ in many places mainly emphasise Thadou-Kukis.

Present work is designed as an exploratory and descriptive with special reference to six Thadou villages in Sadar Hills sub-division under Senapati District – two villages from Saitu Gamphazol Block namely Motbung and T.Molbung, two villages from Sadar Hills East Block namely Saikul and Bolkot and the other two villages from Sadar Hills West Block namely Chalva and Govajang. These six villages are randomly selected as a sample to represent Thadous living in Manipur. Selection of sample villages have been made in order to provide a clear picture of Thadou Kukis living in sub-urban and remote areas in respect of their socio-economic, cultural and educational dimension and consequent change thereof. The study is organised into seven chapters. The first chapter provides conceptual and theoretical background of tribes. Second chapter deals with background of study, problematique of study, research question, objective, hypothesis, universe of study, sample and method of data collection and review of literature. Third chapter provides a secondary data based on origin, migration and settlement process, and on the traditional social structure of Thadou. Fourth chapter economic profile of Thadou analyses the occupational structure, income structure and living standard of the people. Fifth chapter focus on education profile and attempts to find out similarity and difference between early education and present education profile of Thadou in a comparative perspective. Sixth chapter discusses on the socio-cultural life of the Thadou focusing on the family, marriage, kinship, dresses, ornaments, musical instrument, songs, dances, festival and religion and also on the life circle ceremonies related to birth, marriage and death. Last chapter of work provide a brief resume of the finding developed in preceding chapters.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

At the very outset, I thank Dr. Nirakar Mallick, Associate Professor of Sociology department for his unwavering guidance throughout the course of my Ph. D. He has been continuously encouraging and supportive all along. He has been instrumental in bringing about many changes to bring out the best in my work. He had also been instructive in pointing out many things as well as helping me with a ready counsel.

Secondly, I express my heartfelt gratitude to the Head of Department Dr. G. Ram for his ever-ready support and advice for every little problem that I have faced during my course as a scholar. I am grateful to him for making me feel and giving me the place of one.

I also thank the teaching, the office and the general staff and all the employees of the department for every little kind word, support and the slightest nods of appreciation they have accorded me during my tenure. I shall always be indebted to them.

I extend my deepest appreciation to UGC for providing me with funds through NET/JRF from Sept 2010 onwards for which I am able to pursue this research course for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Assam University, Silchar. I wish UGC to know that the fellowship had been fully utilised for the research work without which, this would have been an impossible herculean task.

I have a special duty to thank Dr. Jangkhomang Guite, Assistant Professor of History Department, for giving me continuous advice regarding the subject of my study. I shall also be failing my duty if I forget to thank my friends, Gungapao Rongmei, Rody Vanrohnem Faihriem, (Mary) Lalhrilmoi Hrangchal, Lunminthang Mate, Hemminlal Haokip and others for being there whenever I needed help. Also, I am grateful to all who had given me both solicited and unsolicited advice regarding my work.

On my personal note, I take this opportunity to thank my parents and family who had stood by me at all times. They have been fully encouraging and supportive mentally, economically and academically. I shall always be indebted to them.

Above all, I am thankful to God Almighty for the divine blessing to complete this work successfully.

Nemminthang Lhouvum.
