I can never adequately thank my guru Rev. Dr. H. Francis Soundararaj who admitted me in his first batch of scholars for research. He has been shaping my sensibilities and responses as a student ever since he took over in 1972 as Head of the (Postgraduate) English Department in St. John's College, Palayankottai. I can never forget the letters he wrote from Edinburgh, in the midst of his hectic deliberations as Post-Doctoral Fellow in the Department of English, University of Edinburgh to prop me up at the most crucial hour in the progress of this dissertation, when I sagged in the wake of personal calamity. More than anything, he allowed me, as always, the time and space to formulate my standpoint. I owe this thesis to my teacher.

It is Dr Sp Veerapendian of SIVET College who awakened my interest in research and suggested approaching my teacher. He has been doing invaluable help throughout the course of my study right from its registration to submission. Besides, he has shared with me his reflections and has contributed a great deal through many catalytic discussions.

I gratefully acknowledge the help of Dr Mithra G. Augustine, Principal, Madras Christian College, Dr E.K. Purushothaman, Head of the Dept. of Languages and Mr Nirmal Kumar Abraham, Ass. Professor of English. Mr J.K. Rajasekaran and Mr. John Ponraj have helped a lot.
I recall with gratitude the great help I had from Dr Isaac Sequeira, Dean, College of Arts, Osmania University and author of Theme of Initiation in Modern American Fiction. During the three times I stayed in ASRC, he closely followed my line of argument and helped me with his perceptions.

In A.M. Jain College, where I teach, I am much indebted to Principal R. Balasubramenian who offered much help and advice. For his paternal care, I am immensely indebted to Prof. V.K. Ramamurthy, who has helped me beyond measure in this pursuit. I should thank all my seniors for their invaluable help: the sequential research guides Professors K. Muralidharan Nair, G.S. Keilesam, N.S. Raghunathan and C.V. Mohan Bose for their advice; Professors R. Nareyanaswamy, N. Seshasayee, M.U. Suresh and T. Jerome Padmanathan for their interest in my work. I am very much indebted to Prof. N. Jeyaraman for his valuable comments. Particular mention must be made of Dr A. Krishnamurthy Head of the Dept. of Philosophy and Dr. A. Krishnamurthy next to him in the same department for their invaluable assistance.

It is a pleasure to thank Principal N. Viswanathan, Prof. K. Srinivasan, the Head of the English Department, and Mr Chandra Rao, librarian for generously helping me with books. Prof. S. Balasundaram helped me a lot.

I gratefully remember the goodwill and help of the Director, the librarian and staff of the American Studies Research Centre where I collected a good deal of reference material. I should thank the fellow scholars in ASRC especially Mr Sadan Parida.
I am very much indebted to the librarians and staff of the Madras University library, Connamara State library - and the USIS library.

I acknowledge a general debt to all my teachers in St. John's College and in particular to: Professors Fr. S.R. Sivaramakrishnan, R.S. Arulanandam, S. Mark Joseph, P. Iyadurai and S. Rajapandian. It is a pleasure to acknowledge the help of my friend Prof. R. Kalidasan of American College.

I am immensely indebted to Ms K. Meena who patiently sat through endless revisions to set out a bad formless script in type. I am equally indebted to Mr S.K. Siva of Siva Enterprises Screenprinters and Designers, for attending to all the work including cover design, xeroxing and binding.
By powerful invisible strings – the tug of which hurt where I breathed – I had been drawn to Bellow. In another country, born and grown to adulthood with different Sanskāras, I was trying to locate a personal centre of significance and often wondered if my soul really lay hidden in the pages of Bellow’s novels.
