Acknowledgments

I am deeply and sincerely indebted to my research supervisor and mentor, Dr. K. Chellappan, former Professor and Head, Department of English, Bharathidasan University, Tiruchirapalli, and Director, State Institute of English, Chennai, for his ever-inspiring intellectual guidance and constant source of support. I am especially grateful to him not only for his energetic commitment to language and literature, but also for his evergrowing interest and oceanic depth of knowledge in almost all the branches of ancient and modern literature.

I express my heartfelt thanks to Prof. V. Janakiraman, Professor and Head, Department Of English, Thiru. Vi. Ka. Govt. Arts College, Tiruvarur, whose gentle deeds and words helped me to complete this dissertation. I also thank my colleagues, Prof. N. Muralidaran, Prof. R. Kaladaran and Prof. S. Mohandoss for their cooperation and valuable words of encouragement. I am grateful to all the staff members of the Department of English, St. Joseph's College (Autonomous), Tiruchirapalli - 620 002.

My greatest thanks, as always, are to my brother Dr. S. Rasul Mohaideen for having sparked a fire in me to undertake great tasks in my life. In a similar vein, I thank my brothers Mr. S. Maideen Batcha, and Mr. S. Jeevanprakash and my sisters Mrs. S. Jothiprahash Jayaseelan, and Ms. S. Marxy for their constant support and words of love. My thanks are always due to my inspiring brother Prof. A. Gajendran, Asst. Prof. of Political studies, Jawaharlal Nehru
University, New Delhi, for his intellectual and moral support. I also thank my brother Prof. K. Balamurugan for his discussions. I thank my senior researcher, Ms. D. Vani, for her precious help in making the important novels available to me on time.

My greatest acknowledgment is to University Grants Commission, New Delhi, for having granted me both Junior and Senior Research Fellowships to pursue my research. I gratefully acknowledge the support rendered by Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute, (New Delhi and Calgary) for having granted me a eight months doctoral fellowship to visit Canada and to work with Dr. Helen H. Hoy at the University of Guelph. I take this opportunity to thank Prof. Helen for her invaluable suggestions, discussions, and insights to shape the dissertation. I thank Thomas King, the poet, critic and novelist for his frequent conversations on Native North American literatures and for his inspiring lectures in the class.

I am grateful to the support rendered by the libraries of the Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute, the University of Toronto, Wilfrid Laurier University in Canada, Pittsburgh University in USA, Jawaharlal Nehru University, and the Indian Institute of Technology in New Delhi. I owe lesser but similar thanks to the National Library of Canada, Ottawa, St. Joseph’s College (Autonomous) Library, Trichy, Study Centre for Indian Literature in English and Translation, Madurai, State Institute of English, Chennai, Bharathidasan
The remaining notes of gratitude, some personal, some academic, but most both, I give below: Dr. Prema Kumari Marshal, Director, Centre For Canadian Studies, and Director, Centre for Distance Education, Bharathidasan University, Trichy, Prof. M. Dasan, and Prof. N. Ramachandran Nair, Calicut University, Prof. P. Dhanavel, Anna University, Prof. A. Marx, Sherfoji College, Thanjavur, Prof. Chandra Mohan, Delhi University, Prof. Michael Griffiths, Australian Catholic University, Sydney, Prof. Linda Warley, Wilfrid Laurier University, Canada, Ms. Linda Jones, National Library of Canada, Ottawa, and Prof. Om. P. Juneja, M.S. University, Baroda.

Finally, it is my duty to thank my friends Mr. S. Saravanan, DTP Operator, SS Graphics, Tiruvarur who helped me a lot to shape this dissertation, and Mr. Ra. Suresh Thirumurugan for his timely help. I thank Dr. Stefan Rehm, University of Guelph, Canada, for his editorial help.