I would like to thank my supervisor, Professor Mohammad Gulrez, for his kind assistance and patience with me throughout my work on this thesis. I am grateful to him for extending his scholarly grace in abundance towards me. He really spared no available effort for the success of this thesis. He instilled in me the values of scientific inquiry and intellectual integrity. Professor Gulrez always received me with a smile and gave much of his time to me in spite of his busy schedule. His kindness goes well beyond the scope of my work. He supported me morally and materially at difficult moments, and always created an atmosphere of tenderness. I would like also to thank Professor Naima Gulrez for her moral support and encouragement throughout. Professor Gulrez and his family always made me feel at home.

I am deeply grateful to my parents who have been the cause of my existence and who have extended their unlimited love and kindness to me throughout my life. They have indeed bathed me in their bountiful tenderness and affection and extended the same towards my little kids. I shall remain indebted to them beyond the confines of my capabilities. The sad experience of the untimely death of my mother (may God bless her soul)—who always ignited the spirit of ambition within me, sacrificed a lot in her typically bountiful manner for the sake of making me a man of whom she can be proud and who passed away during the last stage of my work on this thesis—was a severe time for time, and has left a gap in my life that cannot be refilled again. It is an affliction that she did not live long enough to see the blossoms of her seeds. My gratitude is also due to my wife and kids, as well as to my brothers and sisters, who put up with my absence from home. Their reassuring phone conversations and prayer provided me with much inspiration and determination.
My thanks also go to the staff of the seminar of West Asian Studies, Maulana Azad Library, and the library of the Dept. of Islamic Studies, AMU, for their assistance and cooperation during my work on this thesis. I would like also to express my thanks to the staff of the Center of West Asian Studies for their kind assistance throughout the course.

Special thanks go to my intimate friend and colleague, Bandit Aroman, for his moral support and assistance in formal procedures during my absence. Bandit, a sincere brother indeed, stood by me in moments of crisis and spared no effort in alleviating my suffering.
