CONCLUSION AND FUTURE PROSPECTS OF THE STUDY.

India is going to experience the emergence of the Small industries sector, which is qualitatively superior, technologically vibrant and internationally competitive. The objective of the policy-makers as well as Small industry associations is to enable this sector more vibrant and competitive in the next 10-15 years. The progress of MSEs would make a sustainable contribution to national income, productivity and exports. Whatever be the number of motivational activities implemented by the Central and State government, it would not be very significant unless and until the fruits of these activities reach to the target groups i.e. the business Enterprises owners. The present prime minister of India introduced, Make in India, Made in India, Digital India, Start-up India, Stand-up India etc. to enhance the number of Micro and Small enterprises in the economy. So, it has great potential to conduct research studies over the issues related with above programs.
