Acknowledgements

At the outset I convey my heartfelt gratitude and indebtedness to my guide, Dr. Dipak Das, Associate Professor (Law), the University of Burdwan. With his stellar guidance, profound knowledge, constant support and encouragement, I could venture into the onerous task of understanding the problems and promotion of the administration of Juvenile justice in India under the influence of United Nation and the Indian Judiciary. Dr. Das provided the platform and guided me to carry out the study. I owe my most sincere thanks to him. I have been greatly benefited by the invaluable guidance of Professor Dr. Shiv Sahai Singh, department of law, the University of Burdwan in understanding the nuances of the successive progress of the right to child in India. I express my gratitude to him. I express my gratitude to Professor Dr. Manik Chakraborti, Professor Dr. Sarit Kumar Sadhu, Head of the Department Dr. Sanjeev Kumar Tiwari, Associate Professor Dr. Jayanta Kumar Saha, Associate Professor Dr. Paresh Kumar Acharya and all other teacher and teaching staffs, associated with the department of law under the University of Burdwan.

The University of Burdwan has provided me the excellent academic ambience and fostered an essential climate of intellectual freedom of the study. I owe my special thanks to Department of Law, the University of Burdwan and all its faculty and staff for providing me the enabling and conducive environment. I owe my thanks to the United Nations and its authorities for providing me the copies of publications of the UN through courier and for according necessary permission to reproduce part of UN publications. For the study, I have drawn heavily from many articles, reference books, reports and various publications. No expression of gratitude and thanks to them can be adequate. Every care has been taken to properly refer to the authors and their works in the thesis. However, if some omission has crept in inadvertently, I tender unqualified apologies.

In the year 1999 I have started my practicing career as an Advocate and since 2005 am working as an Assistant Public Prosecutor in the Courts of Judicial Magistrates. While practicing and working as such, I got the exposure to the vagaries of justice through court of law. My continued association and interaction with Ld. Advocates, my friend colleagues,
Judges, several other legal professionals attached with Court practice & procedure, different NGO’s have helped me in negotiating the difficult and at times confusing and conflicting path, to understanding the various facets of both global, national as well as regional paradigm of Juvenile Justice and in particular in the state of West Bengal. I express my sincere thanks to all of them.

I convey my sincere thanks to my mother Smt. Minati Das for her support. Perhaps, the study would not have taken off and survived had I not got unstinted encouragement, support and motivation from my friend Dr. Chinmoy Samajdar, Senior Manager, DSP, Durgapur. I gratefully and respectfully acknowledge it.
