ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Those who inspired, encouraged and gave me a helping hand in the preparation and propounding my thesis on a subject which appears to be simple, but needs a great thought and deliberation deserve my thankfulness.

An astute scholar and a person of firm convictions, Prof. C.S.N. Raju, Dean, Faculty of Social Sciences and Coordinator, Research Cell, Acharya Nagarjuna University, drives his research scholars to find and state, to pursue and prove. A true teacher, he is, for whom official positions sit light on his shoulders. Unshakable in his determination, he is at once outspoken without malice at heart and in mind. Indeed, he is a guide, friend and philosopher, who guided me in the unfathomable waters of social science research, with skill and dexterity. From the bottom of my heart, I am beholden to him for the inspiration and motivation, he provided throughout my humble endeavor.

Prof. K. Raja Babu, Head of the Department of Economics and Applied Economics, Acharya Nagarjuna University, always has been inspiring with his ready availability, and I thank him.

Prof. B. Sambasiva Rao, Chairman, Board of Studies in Economics (PG), and Coordinator, PG & Professional Examinations, Acharya Nagarjuna University, assertive with flair for research always has been encouraging and helpful with his easy manner and ready smile, for which I am grateful to him.

Prof. N. Sudhaka Rao, Professor, Department of Economics & Applied Economics, Acharya Nagarjuna University, has been amicable, cheerful and helpful and to him, I express my thankfulness.

Prof. M.V. Narasimha Sarma, Professor, Department of Economics & Applied Economics, Acharya Nagarjuna University, an erudite scholar, but humane, ever ready to help, goes all out to see people out of their difficult situations. I am no exception. His help in the statistical part of my thesis needs a special mention, which I do here with a sense of deep felt gratitude.

Prof. M. Koteswara Rao, Professor, Department of Economics & Applied Economics, and Coordinator, Examinations, Centre for Distance Education, Acharya Nagarjuna University, is unassuming, simple and helpful, for which, I am always grateful.

Prof. P. Narasimha Rao, Professor, Department of Economics & Applied Economics, Acharya Nagarjuna University, an expert in econometric methods and a committed researcher, as the Head of the Department, helped me with all details when I approached him years ago for admission in the Department as research scholar. I thank him.
Dr. K. Madhu Babu, Assistant Professor, Department of Economics & Applied Economics, Acharya Nagarjuna University, young and dynamic, is always ready to help. I thank him.

I thank Dr. R. Venkata Rao, Assistant Professor (adhoc), Department of Economics & Applied Economics, Acharya Nagarjuna University, for his help.

My mother, late Smt. Challa Suryakantam and my father, late Sri Challa Lakshminarayana, retired District Revenue Officer, who left for heavenly abode during the last one year, whose upbringing with kindness, generosity and love made me what I am today. I always remember.

My brothers, sisters-in-law, sisters, brothers-in-law and cousins, nephews and nieces enriched my understanding of life.

I am grateful to my employer, Tellakula Jalayya and Polisetty Somasundaram College, Guntur and its management members, who enabled me to develop my career as a teacher in economics.

I have many friends, out of whom, two deserve mention. Mr. B.R. Anand, former Executive Director, APSRTC, Hyderabad and Wing Commander V. Gouripathi of Indian Air Force, Hyderabad made my life fulfilled, by their readiness to counsel, help and also lend an ear and shoulder when I needed. I thank them and remember them always.

My wife, Mrs. T.D. Vimala, has always been counseling and encouraging. I derive part of my strength from her. An unalienable part of my life, Mrs. Vimala stands by me always literally and figuratively.

My son, C.S. Kalyan and daughter-in-law, Sirisha; and my daughter, D.N. Bharathi and son-in-law, D. Anil Kumar, always make my life fulfilled to pursue research.

I thank Mr. Ch. Rajesh, Department Clerk, Department of Economics & Applied Economics, Acharya Nagarjuna University, for his all-round support to me any time, which he has been smilingly obliging. I thank Mr. K. Nageswara Rao, Research Scholar, for his help in computer work. I thank N. Yohan, P. Santamma, Office Staff of the Department, for their support.

Last, but not the least, I express my gratitude to Sri Vadlamani Umamaheswara Rao, a reputed Chartered Accountant, who goaded me to continue research and provided me with a wide variety of books and helped me in many ways for this simple and sincere research document.

-Challa Satyanarayana Murthy