ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The present thesis is an outcome of intense practical training and field work. It is a moment of privilege to express my regards and offer my thankfulness to all the people whose help and support were crucial in completion of present research work.

I take immense pleasure in acknowledging Prof. Satbir Kaur, Present Head, Human Biology Department and Prof. Promila Mehta (Former Head, Human Biology Department) for providing needed administrative and infrastructural facilities for field work.

I take opportunity to express my sincere gratitude to my supervisor Dr Rupinder Kaur, for valuable guidance at every step in completing this thesis, without her encouragement, inspiration, proper guidance and advices, this present research work would not have been completed. I am also deeply indebted to her for having spared her precious time to go through the manuscripts and for her valuable and critical suggestions made while preparing this field report.

My sincere thanks to my research co-supervisor Prof. Surinder Nath (Retired Professor, University of Delhi), a fatherly figure, for his continuous guidance, constant encouragement, valuable suggestions, critical evaluations and informative discussions throughout the work. He has been highly motivating and cooperative despite of his busy schedule.

I am highly thankful to all the help and service I received from Principals, teachers, students of schools and other subjects of District Dehradun, Uttarakhand. I feel indebted to them for their inevitable patience reflected in our research encounters.

I am extremely grateful to all the staff members of Department of Human Biology, especially Prof. S.P. Singh and Prof. S.M.S. Chahal for their critical reflections on my research work. I owe special regards to Dr. Rajinder Kumar for administrative help and Librarian of Departmental library for his constant assistance.

With heartiest gratitude a special thanks to my father Mr. Ranbir Singh Kharyal, who stood there as a role model inspiring me for my work. He also helped improving my short comings throughout the thick and thin of my work process. Another respectful acknowledgement goes out to my mother Mrs Usha Kharyal who was a strong pillar of support throughout, counseling me in my moments of low spirit and distraction. It is because of her unconditional love due to which, I could work with persistence during all these years. Special thanks to my younger brother Anupam who helped me in all aspects including technical as well as personal ones.

I owe special thanks to all my friends especially Snigdha and Rajendra for rendering their unconditional support, time and energy during the preparation of my Ph.D. thesis and beyond. Another heartfelt thanks to Renu and Kamal for their blissful company.

Archana Kharyal