ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Success depends on motivation, inspiration, dedication, hard work and above all the blessing of the God. I bow in the reverence to the Almighty for blessing me with strong will power, patience and confidence that helped me in completing the present work.

I would like to express my heartfelt gratitude to my research advisor, Dr. Netra Pal Singh for agreeing to supervise this PhD project, for all his guidance and advice, for the large amount of time that he has devoted to discussions of my research, as well as providing me with the opportunity to work in the Ground Water Quality Assessment of and Development of Low Cost Decontamination Methods Research Group.

I am also grateful to all members of the Indian Institute of Toxicology Research center for contributing to the very friendly working environment and for their constant willingness to participate in discussions, and those who used to work here, specially to my senior Vinod Sir for his Advise, friendship, ideas and help, but specially for sharing with me enjoyable moments playing football indoors along with other friends.

I express my sincere gratitude and indebtedness to Dr. K.r. P. Singh, Scientist G, Environmental Chemistry Division, IITR, Lucknow under whose guidance I had the privilege to do my dissertation work. I am grateful to him for providing me the necessary facilities, meticulous guidance, constructive criticisms, encouragement and valuable suggestions during my thesis work.

Words would be inadequate to record my special depth of gratitude to Dr. Neeraj Tandon, for his inspiration and invaluable help in conducting this study.

I am extremely thankful to my friends especially Amar, Priyanka Pandey and Mukesh for their useful advice, moral support and timely help during the course of work.

Words often fail to express my humble gratitude and profound regard to my family members especially my brother Sundar Singh and sister Aradhana for their affectionate encouragement and blessing which always being a source of inspiration for me without which it could not have been possible to achieve my targets.

My efforts will remain incomplete if I do not express my gratitude to my wife Sangeeta Singh for her encouragement, moral support and suggestions without which my project work was a tough task.

At last I dedicate my work to my most lovable and adorable mother who took so much pain to make my career, and never let anything come in between the path of my higher education. Whatever I will be achieving in my life will always be because of her.

Date: Uday Veer Singh