Acknowledgements

I am grateful to my supervisor Dr. Sucheta Mahajan in guiding me for the successful completion of the work. I express my sincere gratitude to Dr. Harish Narain Das my co-supervisor from the Centre for the Study of Social Systems who gave me valuable suggestions and comments and instilled confidence by rendering emotional and academic support at various stages of my work.

The major part of my thesis developed under the supervision of Professor Majid H. Siddiqi. No words can express my gratitude for his pragmatic advises and patience in dealing with my late submissions. His kind but firm comments formulated my scattered ideas into a disciplined form. I am extremely thankful to Professor Sabyasachi Bhattacharya, with whom I started my research. He motivated my feeble insights and restored my confidence to pursue my academic aspirations. I am thankful to Prof. Aditya Mukherjee, Chairperson of the Centre for Historical Studies for his kind and valuable help. I thank Professor Bhagwan Singh Josh, who had been a source of inspiration throughout my entire JNU life. I also extend my thanks to all the members of the CHS faculty of JNU.

Dr. Laurent Pordie, Head of the Department of Social Studies at the French Institute of Pondicherry gave a new direction to the study. He helped me to look at therapeutic practices of indigenous societies through the frames of Anthropological gaze. I am extremely thankful to him. I express my sincere thanks to Professor Deepak Kumar of the Zakir Hussain Centre for Educational Studies whose comments on my synopsis helped me to reformulate my ideas. I have immensely benefited from the suggestions given by Dr. V. Sujatha of the Centre for the Studies in Social Systems, JNU.

A large number of individuals and institution had influenced me in formulating my ideas. From the narratives of my grandfather on his experiences with colonial modernity, to the use of home based medicines by my mother as alternatives to allopathic medicine, the hegemonic influence of the Christian notions of sin, disease and death with which I grew up, the primacy of healthcare in urban discourse and the supremacy accorded to western trained medical practitioners, etc., helped to rethink on the status and role of medicine in society throughout the various stages of this work.

The initiation into the exploration on the relationship between Caste and Medicine and its negotiation with western medicine occurred when I was working as research assistant on a UGC project with Professor Pradip Chaudhary of the Centre for Economic Studies and Planning (CESP, JNU) on the Rise of Caste Consciousness in India, and with Dr. Anil Kumar of Satyavati College, University of Delhi on Medicine and the Rise of Nationalism in India. I am extremely thankful to them.

It was by chance that I stumbled on an old directory, on the prominent members of the Ezhavas, titled ‘who is who in Ezhava’ published sometime in the mid-twentieth century, which was discarded by a friend of mine Murali Kallumel, when he was vacating his hostel room in JNU. This was extremely helpful in tracing a large number of the descendents of the indigenous medical practitioners among the Ezhavas.
I express my gratitude to the Late Professor Dr. Madhusoodhanan, former Principal and Professor Parameshwaran Potty of the Ayurveda College, Thripunithura, Professor Padmapadhan, of the Maharajas College Ernakulam, Dr. Sudarshan of Marma manthra vaidyasala, Kollam, and Dr. Jaganathan, who had found time to share their ideas with me in spite of their pressing commitments.

I am thankful to my friend Udaya kumar with whom I had long hours of discussions which helped in the formulation of my ideas. Viji Vikraman, student of Ayurveda at the Government College Thripunithura took me to the disciplinary practices of Ayurvedic curriculum. I render my sincere thanks to him.

I thank my dear friend Bino. P. Jose with whom I discussed my ideas at the various stages of its development. I express my gratitude to my friends Ashraf K.K, Manu Bharat, Abraham Maechinkara, Khalid Akter, Sreekumar, Retheesh Babu, Mathew Kuzhalanadan, Elsa Catherine, Nila Mohanan, Sunitha Nair, Mathew George, Anieth Rajan, Roji John, Mahesh Panikkar, Thajudeen, Noushad, Shakeeb, Navas Nisar, Satheesh Chandra Bose, and others.

Words cannot express my gratitude to my friends Osama Zaid, Sree S.V, and Gopakumaran Nair for editing the thesis. I express my sincere thanks to my friends Joshy M. Paul, Ajish. P Joy, Linesh V.V, Simmy Joseph and Md. Kashif who were kind enough to lend their computers so that could complete my work without worry.

Various institutions and libraries made available their archival material and books. I wish to thank the Librarian and staff of the Central Library, CHS/DSA Library and Exim Bank Library of Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, National Archives of India, New Delhi, Central Secretariat Library, New Delhi. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library (Teen Murti), New Delhi, Central Secretariat Library, New Delhi, Indian Council for Historical Research Library, New Delhi, Government Public library, Kollam, Appan Thampuran Smaraka Library, Thrissur, Fatima Mata College Library, Kollam, The Kotakkal Arya Vaidya Sala, Kottakal, particularly Professor K.G. Poulose, the Head of the Publication Department, Government Ayurveda College Library, Thiruvananthapuram and Thrissur, CMS College Library, Kottayam, Kerala University Library and the Oriental Manuscript Library, University of Kerala, and the Kerala State Archives, Thiruvananthapuram.

My parents were supportive of my studies even when they were passing through tough times. I wish to thank my sisters Rekha, Richu, their husbands Nixon, Jayan, and children Nikhitha, Jerin and Renin. They are my source of support and strength. I extend my gratitude to my wife Aruna whose care and affection has helped me to get this thesis through.

Lastly I extend my gratitude to the Indian Council for Historical Research (ICHR) for assisting me with a scholarship so that I could complete my thesis without much financial constraints.

I am solely responsible for the errors and omissions in this work.
