ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

At the outset, I am indebted forever to my parents, the late Smt. Nishamoni Nanda and Sri Braja Kishore Nanda, for their eternal inspiration and encouragement.

It is with sincere gratitude that I acknowledge the guidance and support given to me by my supervisor Professor G.V.C. Naidu. He will remain as an invaluable guide to me.

I will also remain indebted to the valuable suggestions and help of late Dr. Vishal Singh, ex-Professor Southeast Asian Studies and late Dr. P.K. Das, ex-Professor of Southeast Asian Studies of JNU.

I am thankful to the University Grants Commission for awarding me Research Fellowship during 1972-76 and to the School of International Studies of JNU for granting me the Field-Trip fellowship during 1989-90 to visit the United States for the primary research work of my thesis, which I could not avail owing to professional reasons. However, I was able to obtain all relevant material from various sources in U.S through New Delhi based American embassy staff. I am extremely grateful to them for this support.

Not much harm has been done in not availing the required field-trip to either Vietnam or U.S. This is because my IFS colleagues in the Indian Embassies had been extremely helpful in collecting relevant material for me. Due to professional constraints, it is possible only now to submit this thoroughly updated thesis, which one could produce by observing the events in a period of 60 years through convex lenses in a more dispassionate and matured manner.

I am extremely grateful to the library staff members of Jawaharlal Nehru University, ICWA (Sapru House) library, American Center Library, Nehru Memorial Museum Library, Teenmurti House, India International Centre Library, Library of Congress and John F. Kennedy Library for helping me in collecting material for my thesis.
I am also thankful to the Deputy Registrar and staff of J.N.U. who took so much interest in locating my personal registration file which helped me in submitting my thesis.

Both my wife Dolly and my son Nipoon have been hilariously encouraging in my completing the thesis so late. I will remain ever grateful to my daughter, Moonmoon, who herself being a Ph.D in genetics from Cambridge University, has been immensely and sincerely encouraging in my completing this thesis even at this late stage.

A special thanks goes to my fellow colleagues Surinder, K.S. Chimni, Manju, R.K. Soni, Harpal Singh, R.C. Sharma, Bhupal Singh Bisht and lot of others for their lively support all the time in completing the thesis.

Lastly, no words can express my gratitude to my dearest friend late Dr. K.U.M. Rao and other members of his family. Without their loving support finishing this work would have been the most difficult task for me.
