It was on an impulse that I appealed to the good sense of Dr. A.G. Khan to be my research guide. He was gracious enough to respond in the same manner and none of us has repented since. During the process of my studies Dr. Khan opened up new worlds of critical insights for me with his characteristic meticulousness and natural instinct for perfection. The prerogative is entirely mine to express a heart-felt gratitude to him for all this and much more.

I am earnestly thankful to Dr. V.R.N.Prasad, Professor and Head, Department of English, Marathwada University for his generous stimuli all through my research. Prof. Narsu Nihalani has been, of course, a friend. In fact, he is Everyman’s Friend, so everyone knows his goodness. But my thanks to him all the same for never refusing me any help.

It was Shri Gobindbhai Shroff who first inspired me to take up research work. I can not thank him enough for his filial interest in my academic growth. I can never forget the contribution of Dr. Tara Paranjape, Prof. Jayant Yeotikar and Gajanan Taman in my research project. As the principals of my college they relieved me of many routine encumbrances to facilitate my studies. My gratitudes to them all. I am warmly beholden to Prof. Sudhakar Deshpande, Head, Department of English, Peoples’ College, Nanded, for the feeling of confidence he induced in me, in his own quiet way, that verily enabled me to persevere in my work.
I would be failing in my duties in not mentioning C.I.E.F.L., Hyderabad and Marathwada University Libraries for all the help and co-operation they extended during the course of my research. My very special thanks to Mr. Husnain Qureishi of Aligarh Muslim University Library, who went out of the way to help me with the very rare books on Conrad. I am also thankful to Mr. P.M. Jaiswal, Librarian, Peoples’ College, Nanded, for making me available some of the required volumes. I appreciate the pains Mr. Siddqui Ehsan Aziz has taken in computerizing my thesis and typing it very meticulously.

And a personal note. For the very origin of the idea of research I am indebted to my elder daughter, Nisha, whose absence from home created in me the necessity to undertake the research project. I plunged myself in the studies to fill up the void she left by leaving me in favour of her medical studies. I am, very naturally, obliged to my younger one, Prachi, too. But for the simple joys of her presence I could never have completed this project.

Above all, I submit, in all gratitude and humility, to my Guru Baba. He has ever seen me through every walk of life, safe under the benign shelter of Dada, Bhabhi and Didi.
