ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is well said that thesis writing is a common pursuit and collective endeavour. The kind of support services rendered by Dr. A.S. Dasan, Professor of English, my main guide and supervisor, fit aptly into that framework. He taught me the art of committing oneself to the arduous task of writing a thesis. He taught me how to read Bakhtin as a theory and inspired me to handle The Book of Job the way it has been in the thesis writing. His insightful scholarship and his updates on every aspect of new critical idioms propelled me to shape the study towards a stature of certain excellence and high quality. I am grateful to him for what he has been to me. I also express my gratitude to Dr. N.S. Marie Jospeh, Professor of Christian Studies, my co-guide, for the outreaching support he provided every time I met him. His interventions enriched the quality of the research.

The members of the Doctoral Committee offered valuable suggestions and facilitated me to complete the research work. The Office of the Registrar (Evaluation) and the staff of the PhD Section extended their helping hands with warmth. The staff of the Department of English, UoM, were available and supportive just as the staff in the University Library did. I gratefully remember interventions done by Mr. B.N. Balajee, Dr. K.M. Chandar, and a few other critics well versed in the field of research in humanities.

I fondly remember the support services received from Sr. Annette, csst., formerly Principal, Teresian College, Mrs. Nalini Xavier (Mrs. Dasan), HOD, Dept. of English of the College, my Superior General, my Provincial, Sisters of the Teresian community, Rev. Fathers, my family members and my close friends and thank them for what they have done in enabling me to complete the thesis writing.

My special thanks to the Teresian College Staff, the teaching fraternity, and non-teaching staff, particularly Sunil Mathew and Rashmi, and the librarians of the College, Mount Carmel College, St. Peter’s Seminary, and Alwaye Seminary for the goodness and love extended to me in various ways. I cannot forget the timely services rendered by Mrs. Anjana Shashi Kiran in helping me to finalize the Bibliography related to the research.

And above all, I express my profound sense of gratitude to God who inspired me to take up this research on the biblical text, dear to me, which, to a considerable extent, reflects my life as a nun, and people known to me, who have similar experiences.
