Acknowledgement

This thesis is an outcome of an unstinted guidance, suggestions and expert supervision of Prof. Dr. Anuradha Mitra Chenoy. She has been an exemplary guide and a teacher par excellence. Without her co-operation, I could not have been able to do justification to my work. Working under her has been thoroughly enlightening, rewarding and a pleasant experience. Her contributions are unfathomable and unmeasurable. I am specially thankful for her promptitude and detailed comments on earlier drafts on both substance and style. While I owe Prof. Chenoy an incalculable intellectual debt, gratitude is too small a word to repay my indebtedness to her.

Throughout the course of writing this thesis, I have benefited immensely from discussions and valuable suggestions from Prof. Nirmala Joshi, and Dr. Gulshan Sachdeva, which have been duly incorporated. Although they were not associated directly with the present work, yet they have given me inspiration, advice, and moral and emotional support whenever I needed. I will always remain grateful to them as they have never stinted in their support.

My thanks are also due to other faculty members of the center. I extend my sincere gratitude to them for their valuable advice and cooperation throughout the period of my study.

I owe a debt of gratitude to my whole family for their valuable interest, encouragement, specially my Ma and Baba and my husband Sameer. They were always by my side whenever I needed them and had been my inspiration throughout and supported me at all the critical junctures. I am also immensely thankful to my son Shreenik for all his loving words and affection. Though many times I could not provide adequate attention to him due to the constraint of this work, but he has really been very enduring, and a source of comfort for me throughout. I sincerely acknowledge my family's cooperation, who stood by me right from the initiation to the accomplishment of this work.

It is an undeniable fact that field-cum study grants awarded to me at the right stage of my work by various academic organisations like DAAD (German Academic Exchange Programme), ICSSR (Indian Council for Social Science Research), RAS (Russian Academy of Sciences), CIMO (Finnish Center for International Mobility Organisation,) and from Arbetslivsinstitutet (Swedish National Institute for Working Life), provided tremendous encouragement to me, helped me to a great extent in carrying out this work successfully. I express my heartfelt thanks to all these organisations for being considerate towards me.

All these fellowships enabled me to visit various Universities, various libraries, archives, to conduct useful interviews, and also to do short-term courses on the subjects directly related to my topic. These scholarships also privileged me to present papers and hear the lectures of various eminent scholars in International Conferences. Such opportunities also afforded me a chance to hold important discussions with eminent scholars. All these opportunities helped me in enriching my knowledge and understanding on my research subject. During these visits I was also fortunate enough to interact with eminent personalities of "Area studies," International relations, and "Gender studies".

I also offer my sincere gratitude to all my professors in the University of Hannover, University of Helsinki, Moscow State University and University of Stockholm. Thanks are also due to those associated with Cristina Institute and Aleksantri Institute in Helsinki. In Moscow, Institute of Gender Studies, Institute of Ethnology and Anthropology, Institute of Sociology, Institute of Economics, State Institute for International Relations & Institute of Oriental Studies, and in India, National Labour Institute, Center for Women's Development Studies, Tata Institute for Social Sciences, Institute of Defence Studies and Analysis, Ministry of labour, and NGO's Jagori & Nirantar, from whom I received timely cooperation at the crucial stage of this work.

I also offer my heartfelt thanks to all those wonderful women, who are working in various sphere of life in India and in Russia and who spared their valuable time from their busy schedule and provided me with an opportunity to interview them with utmost patience. This cooperation has enabled me to bring this work to its presentable shape.

My special thanks go to Prof. Dr. Katalin Koncz, Dr. Marina Katovskaya, Dr.
Elena Meshcherkina, Dr. Marina Malesheva, Dr. Pekka Sutela, Prof.Leo Grandburg, Dr. Markku Kivinen, Counsellor, Dr. H.M. Saxena for their valuable advises and discussions which greatly helped me in clearing my doubts, broaden my horizon and also threw incandescent light on my research topic. Because of their help I also managed to access valuable material, rare pamphlets, books and Journals.

I must record my deep appreciation and heartfelt obligation to Dr. Krishan Gopal, Mr. Aggarwal, Mrs Kokila and other staff of the JNU library, librarry staff of National Labour Institute, Center for Women's Development Studies, Institute for Defence Studies and Analysis, Indian Council for Social Science & Research, Ministry of Labour, (Govt. of India), Indian Council for World Affairs(Sapru House) and Russian Cultural Center library, who unhesitantly assisted me by making available all the relevant materials needed for my study.

I am equally greatful to all my relatives and friends who have given me all their support, encouragement, advice and solace. I can name only few with the hope that others know that they are also included. Dr.Madhumita, Sanjog, Sonjoy and Archana, Sheh, Katia, Purba, Enakhat, Topo, Lina, Sunepa are some of them

I shall be failing in my duty if I do not mention about the unstinted help rendered by the office staff of CRCA&EES and SIS of my alamamater JNU, where I have spent the best years of my life. I am also thankful to Dr. Aneesh Ahemed for patiently proof reading my thesis. I am thankful to all of them for all their support.

To everyone mentioned above I am greatly indebted. The responsibility for whatever errors may be found as also the opinion expressed is mine.
