ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This work is an attempt to throw light on some aspects of modernization of the college teachers in Thailand from a sociological point of view. Though there is a great deal of concern about the modernization of the personality traits of people in various developing societies, it has not attracted the attention of sociology researchers on a significant scale. The present work is a modest step in that direction.

I was able to complete this doctoral thesis with the help of a number of persons.

First and foremost, I must express my grateful thanks to my respected guide Dr. V.G. Pundlik, for his sustained interest in my research work. He has been open, liberal and kind to me. If the present study has succeeded in achieving its aims, much of the credit goes to him.

I am also grateful to Dr. D.N. Dhanagare, Professor and Head of the Department of Sociology, for giving me all the facilities permissible under the rules.

I am equally thankful to Dr. Y.B. Damle, Dr. (Mrs.) A. Ramannama and Dr. U.B. Boite for their extremely useful comments and suggestions.

Thanks are also due to the Librarians and staff of the Poona University Library and Servants of India.
Society's Library. They provided every book and source I wanted ungrudgingly. I particularly must mention my debt to Shri T.H. Lagu, Honorary professor of library science, University of Poona.

I am indebted to the Thai authorities in the office of the Education Counsellor, Royal Thai Embassy, New Delhi for extending me all kinds of facilities. They were very generous to me.

Lastly, I have to thank my respondents, the college teachers, for their spontaneous response and kind co-operation.

Last but not the least, I must sincerely thank my wife, Sukhawadhana, who stood by me in this academic venture.
