Acknowledgements

At the very outset, I wish to record my thankfulness to Prof. C.P. Chandrasekhar, for stimulating interest in me to take up research on this subject. On a topic where little work has been undertaken before, his guidance extended not only to conceptualising the research problem, but also during various stages of its execution. The healthy criticism that he subjected my work to kept me continuously on the right track. Apart from being my supervisor, he was also a pillar of encouragement and support. My gratefulness to him cannot be expressed in mere words.

Special thanks are also due to Prof. Prabhat Patnaik and Prof. Jayati Ghosh of the Centre for Economic Studies and Planning, JNU, for their support and guidance in the initial stage of this work.

I am very grateful to my teachers at Centre for Development Studies (CDS), Trivandrum, Prof. K.K Subrahmanian and Dr. P. Mohanan Pillai for giving me the necessary background to conduct research in industrial economics. My heartfelt acknowledgments are also due to Dr. Thomas Isaac, who had always encouraged me in my academic pursuits.

On completing my M.Phil from CDS, I had the opportunity to join the National Council for Applied Economic Research (NCAER), New Delhi. The encouragement I received from Prof. S.L Rao and Dr. S. Bhide at NCAER deserves special mention. The impartial guidance provided to me by Prof. K.L Krishna of the Delhi School of Economics, while at NCAER, was the starting point of my Ph.D. programme.
I am also extremely grateful to Prof. R. Radhakrishna, Ex-member Secretary of the ICSSR, who gave me invaluable advice at the beginning of my research.

The Chief Justices of Ahmedabad and Bombay High Courts granted me permission to go through Company documents. The Director of R&D division of Department of Company Affairs, New Delhi, Regional Directors of the Department of Company Affairs in Bombay, Kanpur and Madras also gave me permission to take material from their respective divisions. Without their help, this study would not have taken this shape. I would like to express my gratefulness to each one of them. I also thank the Director of Sardar Patel Institute of Economic Research, Ahmedabad, for granting financial assistance for my field trip.

I am indebted to the librarians of Monopoly Restricted Trade Practices Commission; the Department of Company Affairs; the Institute of Studies in Industrial Development; New Delhi, Ratan Tata Library, Delhi School of Economics; IIM Ahmedabad; IIM Bangalore and Bombay University, for helping me accumulate necessary information. Special thanks are also due to the staff of JNU library and Mr. Sebastian of the National Council for Applied Economic Research.

I am thankful to Dr. Mritunjay Mohanty, Dr. Murthy M.R, Dr. Pyarelal Raghavan, Prof. Raman Mahadevan, Dr. Ram Mohan, Dr. Rama Baru, and Ms. Richa Arora for invaluable suggestions and constant moral support during the long course of work. I also received inestimable help from my friends, Shaju Mangalam, Rajesh Sharma, T.K. Arun, Christopher Das and Rajesh Mahapatra in various phases of data collection.
I thank the faculty, students and staff of the Centre for Economic Studies and Planning (CESP) for providing the necessary academic atmosphere. I wish to specially thank Mr. Rajagopal, Mr. Bist and Mr. Bacha Singh, staff at CESP.

The scholarship I was awarded by the ICSSR was a great help, as I was able to concentrate on my thesis.

I would like to thank Ms. Tara, her husband Dr. Das and their daughter. I also thank Ms. Joicy and her family as well as Ms. Jaya Mohanty and my aunt for making my fieldwork memorable. I also wish to thank friends like Pema, Vijaya, Maiko, Kshema, Lemti, Smitha, Murali, Subu, Kishore, Saikat and Aditi, Sujatha, Rahman, Krishna Kumar, George and many others who were all wonderful companions in the hostel.

I am fortunate to have friends like Vijayanti, Helen, Cynthia, Niyati and Arvind, Param and Prakash Mallya Ranjana and Sudha who have always been supportive and appreciative of my efforts. If not for them, the troubles I had to undergo would have discouraged me long before I could complete this work.

In spite of the long stay away from home and the tedious efforts I had to put into the thesis, I did not miss my family too much. This was because I could always run over to Sindhu, Surendran and their son Divu for some homely food, relaxation and advice on using the computer.
I would like to thank my sisters, brothers, their spouses, nieces and nephews for their constant encouragement and moral support. Not to mention my parents, who, despite the rustic life they lead were never an impediment to my academic growth; in fact they were a constant source of strength to me ever since I left home to pursue my research activities. My cousin Dr. (Fr) Jose Kannanaikal was for me my family in Delhi and at the same time my friend, philosopher and guide on whom I could rely whenever I had to take important life decisions.
