ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to express my sincere gratitude and heart felt thanks to the following persons, who have rendered there invaluable assistance to my humble endeavours.

The Director, Bose Institute, for providing me the Research Fellowship during the tenure of the work.

Dr. S. K. Sen, in - charge, Plant Molecular and Cellular Genetics Unit, who has allowed me to use his laboratory for part of the biochemical work.

The Wood Manager, WIMCO Match Factory, had given me the access to his factory nursery for collection of the experimental material.

Center for Scientific and Industrial Research, New Delhi, for the partial financial support to complete the thesis work.

The staff members of the Distributed Information Centre, Bose Institute, for their endless help in computation of the statistical programmes, search of references, typing and printing of the thesis.

Staff of Madhyamgram Experimental Farm, Bose Institute, for maintenance of the culture raised poplar plants in the field.

All library staff of Bose Institute, for their courteous cooperation at all times of need.

Dr. Mrs. Suchitra Banerjee for her help during the cytological work of this dissertation.

Dr. Mrs. Sampa Das and Dr. Ms. Preetilata Nayak for their help and cooperation.

Dr. Mrs. Mallika Banerjee, for her suggestions regarding the statistical problems.

Mr. Nishit Roy and Mr.S. Gazi, for draftmanship and photography.

Mr. Ashim Poddar, Mr. Bijoy Mondol, Mr. Motilal Singh, Mr. Pravash Basu Roy and Mr. Subal Basak for their unaccountable assistance whenever I required them.

Mrs. Archana Roy, Mrs. Monalisa Chandra and other colleagues of my department for their instinting help and endless suggestions.

Finally, to my family members for their cooperation during the period of my study.

Dr. Amita Pal, who was my mentor and guide through out the period of my studies and without whose endless cooperation and painstaking effort, in every field, during the preparation of this thesis, I feel, I could not have succeeded.

My husband, Mr. Sushmit Mitra, for his understanding, mental support, and the everhelping hand, whenever I needed them.

Lastly, I am really grateful to Shujaato, our son, for willingly bearing with me all the inconvenience that I had caused him.