ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This is my proud privilege of expressing my deepest sense of gratitude and indebtedness to the University of Calcutta. Words perhaps would fail to express the gratitude I owe to the University of Calcutta. This is also my proud privilege of expressing heartfelt gratitude and indebtedness to my supervisor Dr. Dhrubaranjan Dandapat, Reader, Department of Commerce, University of Calcutta. It would have been impossible for me to complete the research work without his constant and inspiring guidance and valuable suggestions at every stage of the study.

I thank the Chief Librarian of the University of Calcutta, Kolkata; Chief Librarian of the Indian Institute of Management, Kolkata; Commercial Library, Kolkata; and Indian Statistical Institute, Kolkata for allowing me to use the library facilities to get the required information that has formed the basis of the study.

I am indebted also to the teachers of the Department of Commerce, University of Calcutta, particularly Prof. Bhabatosh Banerjee, Prof. Sudipti Banerjea, Prof. A. K. Basu, Prof. B. K. Basu, Prof. Jita Bhattacharyya and Dr. J. K. Das for their valuable suggestions.

I profusely express my sincere thanks to all the NGO activists and staff with whom I have interacted during the period of the study.

I express my gratitude to all my colleagues in the Department of Commerce, Alipurduar College, Jalpaiguri, for inspiring me to complete the work. Thanks are also due to my numerous friends, specially Chandrakanta, Debasish, Amar and Subhadip for their cooperation.

I am indebted also to Dr. Jaydeb Bera, Mr. Tapas Roy, Dr. Amalendu Bhunia and others for their constant support, inspiration and suggestions.

Finally I would like to express my affection and heartfelt gratitude to my wife Damayanti who have tolerated all my failure of duty towards her and who stood by me throughout this research work ensuring the completion of all chapters by meticulous follow up and gentle reminders.

Bhaskar Bagchi