ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I express my sincere gratitude to Dr. P. C. Jain, Centre for West Asian Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University New Delhi, who supervised this thesis. His observations and suggestions have made this work better each time and his own search and findings about overseas Indians have greatly contributed to my understanding of this field of research. Throughout the past six years of my interactions with him, he always remained incredibly calm and patient with my ways and, I am indeed grateful.

I am thankful to Dr. Shalva Weil, Department of Social Anthropology, Hebrew university, Jerusalem, for initiating me into the field with great enthusiasm, for sharing her own experiences as a researcher on the Indian Jews and for being a vivacious presence throughout my field work in Israel.

Thanks are also due,

To Prof. A.H.H. Abidi, formerly in Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, for his first few kind words on an early synopsis on the Indian Jews when I first began studying this community. They provided enormous motivation to pursue this research. I am particularly grateful to him for giving everlasting memories of excellent lectures on West Asia,
To Prof. Jonathan Frankel, Hebrew university, Jerusalem for his personal attention and academic advice during my stay in Israel,

To Prof. David Shulman, Hebrew University, Jerusalem, for his affection and care and also for his love and understanding of India,

To Prof. Don Handelman, Hebrew University, Jerusalem, for his willingness to discuss my work with me. A couple of meetings with him were a watershed event in my field work. The questions he asked, I never thought of before.

To Prof. Ashis Nandy, Centre for the Study of the Developing Societies, New Delhi, for his encouragement and support. His sharp observations about the Jews in Cochin have nourished my data,

To Shlomit Chayat, Rothberg School for Overseas Students, Hebrew University, Jerusalem, who very kindly taught me Hebrew, and

To Prof. Gulshan Dietl, Chairperson, Center for West Asian Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, for her cooperation.

My sincere gratitude to the Cochin and Bene Israel Indian Jews in Israel, for their cooperation and patience. In particular, I owe a lot to the inhabitants of Nevatim whom I consistently pestered with my frequent visits and hundreds of probing questions. My deepest gratitude to those very many members of the community who willingly spent numerous hours reminiscing about life, past and present. Special thanks to Hayim Yefeth and Shoshana Hayim, for giving me parental care in Israel. Thanks also to those families, both in Cochin and Bombay who extended great help during this research.

The field work for this study was made possible by a Visiting Research Fellowship from Government of Israel and I am grateful for it. I acknowledge the help extended to me by Mr. Arthur Lenk and Mr. Eyal Rak of the Israeli Embassy, New Delhi. I am also thankful to the Indian Council of Social Science Research for providing partial assistance for writing up this thesis.

Librarians and staff of Jawaharlal Nehru University Library, New Delhi; Ratan Tata library, Delhi University; Hebrew University library, Jerusalem; Ben Gurion University library, Beersheba and Ben-Zvi Institute library, Jerusalem and Central Zionist Archives, Jerusalem, extended great assistance for this research and I am extremely thankful to them.

Many have extended emotional and material support during this work. Avi Soloman has contributed to this endeavour, in terms of ruthless critiques and valuable material assistance. His humour cheered me throughout field work in Israel. I will cherish it always.

I am thankful to Lin and Kumaraswamy for their hospitality in Israel.
Many thanks also to Richa, Mukul, Miroslav and Erke for their support at different stages of this research.

I am also thankful to Saritha Samson and Anil Abraham for keeping their doors always open to me in Cochin.

My deepest appreciation and thanks go,

To Munmun, for his splendid company,

To Sreekumar, for his immense consolations,

To Bobby, who influenced me intellectually and who shared many dreams with me, and

To my sister, my friend.

To my parents, I owe the singular debt and gratitude of a daughter who was always encouraged and supported.

I also take this opportunity to thank Mrs. T. Kameswari Viswanadham for typography.

And finally, I would like to add that this work has gained much from all those persons mentioned above, but the weaknesses of it are mine alone.
