Details of the Weimar Triangle

At the ministerial level, the meetings in Weimar (28-29 August 1991) constituted the first tripartite meeting between foreign affairs ministers. These meetings focused on relations between the EEC and the countries of Central and Eastern Europe.

Other ministerial meetings have been held on a regular basis since 1994 at the level of Defence ministers. The Finance ministers have been meeting regularly since 2001. The Social Affairs and Labour ministers met for the first time in the Weimar format on 30 May 2003.

At the parliamentary level, contacts were first made in November 1992 in Bonn, with a meeting of Foreign Affairs Committees. A meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committees of Germany’s Bundestag, France’s Assemblée Nationale and Poland’s Diète was held in Berlin in January 2004.

The first informal trilateral meeting took place in Gdansk on 21 September 1993 between the presidents of France, Germany and Poland, on the occasion of the conferment of degrees honoris causa on Messrs. François Mitterrand and Lech Walesa.

The first summit bringing together the presidents of France and Poland and the German chancellor was held in Poland, in Poznan, on 21 February 1998.

The summits held in Nancy on 7 May 1999 and in Hambach (Palatinate) on 27 February 2001 affirmed the three countries’ desire to expand their cooperation.

The meeting in Paris (23 April 2002), which commemorated the tenth anniversary of the creation of the Weimar Triangle, affirmed the three countries’ desire to modernize the activities of the Weimar Triangle by devoting it even further to Poland’s integration in Europe.

The summit in Wroclaw of 9 May 2003 took place a few days before the referendum on Poland’s accession to the European Union, announcing the position that this country would hold among the “Big Six” countries.
The summit in Nancy on 19 May 2005 marked the commitment to strengthening their trilateral cooperation, in terms of the EU’s internal issues as well as its foreign relations.
