Acknowledgement

This research work started as the most precious dream to be fulfilled in my life. And of course, help and cooperation from many people enabled me in fulfilling the dream successfully. So I must acknowledge their valuable contributions to this research from the bottom of my heart.

Firstly, I wish to express my sincere gratitude to my supervisor Prof. (Dr.) Bula Bhadra, whose constant support and guidance has really been a blessing to me. She has been an excellent teacher, who contributed to my life by enabling me to think sociologically and to develop a broader horizon. Her criticisms also have had a positive functional impact because these posed challenge before me to overcome the limitations, go ahead with my work and finish it properly. She has been an immensely supporting supervisor, who not only went through my writings but also provided me with every possible kind of study materials as and when required. Her suggestions have added enormously to this dissertation. Her words of encouragement in every step of my life during these years not only led me towards the successful completion of this dissertation, but in each and every moment I have learnt a lot from her.

I also express my indebtedness to my family members, my Baba (father) Mr. Rama Prasad Dutta, Maa (mother) Smt. Chhaya Dutta, Didi (sister) Ms. Ratnabali Dutta and my husband Neel (Sugata Ghosh) without whose support it would not have been possible for me to complete this research. My special gratitude goes to my sister who helped me to reach this position even at the cost of her own sacrifices. Their constant encouragement helped me to go ahead with my academic pursuits even sometimes at the cost of family necessities. It was their dream too to see me complete my Ph. D and their enormous and unconditional love and blessings and often their sacrifices inspired me to live up to their expectations. Though none of my family members had any formal academic degree in Sociology, but during my whole academic career they have helped me in whichever way they could like by arranging respondents for my interviews, making photocopies of the interview schedules or even sometime by typing some portions of this dissertation. They have always been the greatest support in my life.

My dissertation would not also have been possible without the support of my in-laws and other family members, especially my father in-law Late Kumar Krishna Ghosh, who after my marriage supported me through out in pursuing my academic aspirations. I am also grateful to my sister in-law Dr. Aparajita Ghosh, my aunt-in-law ‘Rangai’ Smt. Maitreyee Datta and niece Trisha who inspired me to complete my Ph.D thesis with full dedication.

I am indebted to Prof. Bipul Kumar Bhadra, whose intellectual and practical suggestions have helped me in fulfilling my academic pursuits. I am also thankful to him for the books that he provided during my research. I also thank all my teachers and professors for enabling me to finish my doctoral dissertation with utmost sincerity and devotion.

I express my gratitude also to Dr. Aditi Ghosh, who helped and guided me initially in grasping the ideas of linguistics as well as in acquiring sound knowledge in sociolinguistics. I also thank Sucharita Chakraborty, Debopam Das, Umashankar Banerjee, Dripta Piplai and Sunetra Basu for helping me in learning a new discipline.

While acknowledging the help and contributions of several people to my research I can not forget my friends. My childhood companions along with college friends and colleagues all have extended their best wishes and helping hand whenever I needed. Thus, I thank Amrita, Sudipta, Madhurima, Sumana, Aliviya, Srijita, Moumita, Barnikadi, Swagatadi, Nandini and Debanjali for always being there by my side by providing their valuable suggestions and help.
I thank Saheli Chowdhury for always listening to my ideas patiently and also for providing me with significant insights that can be of help to me. I also thank Suvankar, Dibyenduda, Kingshukda, Oindrila and Deepika for their best wishes.

I wish to thank Dr. Sreemati Mukherjee for her suggestions for my research and her academic orientation and guidance have also enlightened me regarding the area of this research.

I also acknowledge the contributions of Ankita Das and Pritha Mukhopadhyay, who helped me in transcribing some of the recordings of the interviews. I also thank Pritika, Dipika, Suchandra and Sushmita in this regard.

Finally, I am extremely grateful to all my respondents, who not only gave their valuable time for the interviews but also enriched my knowledge by sharing with me their experiences. I thank them all from the core of my heart. Without their active participation I could not have done this research.
