ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis is the product of sustained hard work of many years which would not have been possible without the cooperation and assistance of numerous individuals, in both personal and institutional capacities, who all deserve my heartfelt gratitude.

I feel privileged to have as my supervisor Professor (Dr.) Sukla Bhaduri of the Department of Geography, University of Calcutta. Without her encouragement, inspiration, support and advice, I would never have had the confidence to undertake this task, let alone see my thesis grow and finally take shape. She has also been extremely patient and a source of motivation, guiding me and regulating my thought process constantly. I am most deeply indebted to my mentor.

Furthermore, I would also like to express my gratitude to Professor (Dr.) Ranjan Basu of the Department of Geography, University of Calcutta for instructing us about the various aspects of research methodology in all their minute details. Similarly, I am equally thankful to Professor (Dr.) Ashis Sarkar, my teacher in the erstwhile Presidency College, who was the first to provide me with a holistic vision of modern geography as an academic discipline and much of what I know about quantitative and qualitative research, I have learnt from him. Likewise, I must also acknowledge the contribution of Ms. Jharna Talukdar who provided the foundation to my interest in Geography during my school days.

I would also like to thank my other teachers of the Department of Geography, University of Calcutta and the erstwhile Presidency College for their consistent intellectual guidance and affection and the departmental staff of University of Calcutta for their unstinted cooperation. A special mention in this regard must be made of the library staffs of the University of Calcutta and Mr. Satya Bhattacharya, Librarian of the Bureau of Applied Economics and Statistics, Govt. of West Bengal, who have always been amply cooperative.

I am also grateful to Mr. D.K. Gupta (Traffic Manger of CSTC), Mr. Anindya Roychowdhury (Long Distance Traffic Manger of CSTC), Mr. Chanchal Deb (Head, Statistic Department., CSTC), Mr. R.N. De and Mr. Swarup Pal (CTC officials), Mr. Arnab Nandi, Mr. Ranjan Dutta and Mr. Sankar Bhattacharya (WBSTC officials) and all the private and mini bus owners who assisted me in conducting my surveys.

I am especially thankful to my friend and fellow research scholar at the Department of Geography, University of Calcutta, Ms. Eshita Boral for assisting me in all my surveys, for offering constructive criticism at crucial junctures and for providing both intellectual and emotional support at every step of the way.

Most importantly, I would like to thank Mrs. Minati Dey, my mother, for all the love, care, support and affection she has showered me with during every stage of my life since childhood. Similarly, I would also like to thank my father, Mr. Shyama Prosad Dey for instilling in me both confidence and resilience and my younger sister Ms. Srota Dey for being a constant source of joy and companionship. In addition, I am also thankful to my parents-in-law, Mr. Amal Chakraborty and Mrs. Tapati Bhattacherji who have loved me as a daughter and have assisted me during the various phases of my research after marriage.

Finally, I must thank my husband, Dr. Abin Chakraborty, whom I have known as a friend since my school days, who has been an unshakeable source of love, strength and confidence in my life and has assisted me in every imaginable way in successfully completing my thesis.

This apart there are innumerable other fellow scholars, academics, transport officials and acquaintances who have each contributed in their own ways to the successful completion of my research. Even though I am unable to mention all of their names, they all deserve my gratitude.
