Acknowledgements

To write an acknowledgement in lines is injustice to the literature itself, it is one of the toughest jobs amongst all. It is not like a hypothesis or a theory, which you can prove or disapprove on the basis of predictions and experiments. It is an abstract feeling, somehow which comes from the core of one’s heart for those whom you admire.

First of all, I would like to offer deepest and sincerest gratitude to my Ph.D. Supervisor, Prof. Indu Talwar, Professor, Department of Anthropology, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for providing me with the essential guidance, assistance and expertise that I needed during my research work. Prof. Indu Talwar gave me freedom to explore my genius to its depths and at the same time contributed valuable feedback, advice, and encouragement. She has been a mentor to me in truest sense of the word. Her constant encouragement has been a significant source of perseverance for me to reach this stage of fulfilment for my thesis. Her advice on both research as well as career building initiatives has been most invaluable. I am humbled by her magnanimity.

I am extremely grateful to Prof. Abhik Ghosh, Chairperson, Department of Anthropology, Panjab University, Chandigarh for providing me the departmental facilities at all points of time during my research work. I am also thankful to all my teachers at the Department of Anthropology, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for they have contributed to my knowledgebase and encouraged me to achieve this target. They all had a substantial influence on my research.

I am also indebted to Commanding officers 3rd Sikh regiment, 6 JK RR and SSP Bandipore for giving me permission to carry out study in such a strategic area. This research would have been impossible without the immense contribution in terms of time and resources invested by the subjects of the study. They were not mere subjects for the study but rather equal participants in the research.
I fall short of words in expressing my heartfelt profound gratitude to my family members especially my most loving parents, without whose support and selfless efforts, my work would not have come to a completion. It is the time to be with them and bear the load of their old age, but they are so kind to me that I feel myself a tender child. They supported and encouraged me unconditionally to continue with my further studies in spite of the hardships of life and survival. Without the unconditional support, love and care of my family this work would not have turned into a tangible reality. I owe my very existence to their hardwork and blessings for me.

The friendships that I have formed over the years from Kashmir to Chandigarh have contributed in their own beautiful way to my life. Extending from my past to my present, from those who were a part of my life at one time to those who are embedded in my present, have all weaved beautiful memories together with me at different stages of my life. They all have made their said unsaid contributions in this thesis as well. I shall always remain indebted to their contributions for everything. To name a few would be an injustice since a lot cannot be said in a few words and by acknowledging few names. Without naming any particular friends, I owe them all that I have managed to achieve till date.

I would also like to thank the administrative and technical staff in the Department of Anthropology for their facilitation all through my research work. I also acknowledge the financial assistance that was provided to me by the UGC in form of fellowship. This fellowship has been a lifeline for conducting unhindered research free of financial constraints.

Above all I thank Almighty for his divine providence throughout my study, and I pay my acknowledgement and say thanks to one and all that have helped me making this work see light of the day and to be worth study for the readers.
